Today

After Labor Day.
The Big Question Mark.
Plenty for 100,000?
Or Enough for 1,000,000?

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LABOR DAY has gone. The problem of unemployed labor remains.

What is to be done? A being from another planet might find the problem simple.

It comes to this:

"How can you take care of idle, hungry men in a land with unlimited supplies of food, plus unlimited supplies of money?"

NEARLY FIVE HUNDRED MILLIONS to be spent on buildings by the national government are expected to provide jobs for 100,000 men. Good news for the building trades.

But 100,000 jobs in one set of trades mean little in a problem involving six to eight millions unemployed. Something else is needed to take care of what Mr. Woll, of the American Federation of Labor, calls "the coming winter that will test our faith in each other," and to avoid "lawlessness most widespread in the nation's history," predicted by Clarence Darrow. Mr. Woll says:

"Jobs are the workers' prosperity."

EGGS ARE the poultryman's prosperity, but suppose the hens do not lay. This seems to be industry's moulting season. Mr. Woll says:

"Those who control work opportunities should contribute jobs."

Industry cannot contribute jobs if it cannot sell what the jobs produce. The payroll of this nation is $60,000,000,000 a year. You cannot produce that like a rabbit from a magician's hat.

MR. WOLL ELOQUENTLY denounces "the paradox of starvation beside the heaps of plenty."

A government wondering what to do with 200,000,000 bushels of hoarded wheat, while families are hungry, presents a sad spectacle.

THERE IS abundance of food, and plenty of money. The government has credit almost inexhaustible.

But supplying money only for buildings and road-construction will solve no problem.

Everybody expresses a solemn horror of the dole, that according to Dr. Butler "would turn us into a nation of self-made beggars."

THEN, WHAT is to be done?

If you cannot give a hungry family money to buy food, horrible as that suggestion seems, what will you do?

Will you advise the white-collar man, his wife and children to learn bricklaying and work on a post office job?

If they learned, the union would not let them work.

FIVE HUNDRED million dollars in building jobs will supply good wages for 100,000 men and a decent living for their 100,000 families.

Five hundred million dollars given directly to those in need, without deduction of profit for contractors, materials, etc., would supply $500 a year, the living minimum to ONE MILLION men and their 1,000,000 families.

ON THE OTHER hand, $500,000,000 spent for construction would help business and industry and contribute to prosperity's return.

It might be said that giving $500 to each of a million families, enabling them to buy, would also help prosperity.

Opponents of the dole say:

"No, the American worker does not want charity—he wants a job."

There is a good ring to that, but what is the difference between charity and a job artificially created, for charity's sake.

When you create jobs you declare that men willing to work are entitled to a living. That to which a man is ENTITLED is not charity.

SHALL THE government's $500,000,000 be used to provide for 100,000, or for 1,000,000 idle men and their families, thus helping the industry and prosperity's return? Or shall $5,000,000,000, which would be nearer the mark, be used to maintain 1,000,000 or 10,000,000 of the unployed and their families?

Do you wish to placate the unemployed by employing a chosen few, principally at skilled labor, or to provide a bare sufficiency for all in an international calamity?

Five BILLIONS is probably the necessary minimum for this emergency. Our government found double that amount to help Europe, engaged in the noble task of cutting throats.

The prosaic task of helping our own people to fill their stomachs seems to lack the charm possessed by hungry Belgians, or borrowing Britons.

Voters' Enrollment Heavy As State Police Patrol City; More Frauds Bared

Seven patrols of state troopers swept through Pittsburgh today guarding against a renewal of Thursday's disorders as the second and next to last registration day started.

Fifty city police, assigned by Inspector Albert Beebe to Downtown and Hill district registration places, where trouble was anticipated, augmented the 32 state officers who arrived here as the registration started at 8 a. m.

Strong details of both city and state officers were concentrated in districts where Republican factional warfare gave promise of trouble.

The first registration hours, from 8 to 11 a. m., passed quietly, the cruising details of state police casting their visible threat to potential lawbreakers and rioters as a steady stream of voters enrolled.

The Registration Commission late today had subpenas issued for B. Robert Averbach, the sheriff's attorney, and C. M. Reppert, city engineer, after discovering that fraudulent registrations had been made from their homes.

It was understood that Averbach and Reppert were wanted merely to testify if they knew the persons who gave their residences as their homes.

Five or six other subpenas were issued but the names of those

PROBE OF POOR BOARD ORDERED

A sweeping investigation of the Allegheny County Board of Poor Directors was authorized today by Judge James H. Gray as he named a board of three visitors to examine all books, accounts, purchases and donations of the board and the county poor home.

Naming of the board was a victory for K. William Schuchman, of Dormont, who last week petitioned the court for appointment of the visitors under an act of 1852, alleging that light on transactions of the board, chiefly real estate purchases, warranted a searching probe.

In granting Schuchman's petition, Judge Gray named E. H. Wicks, G. M. McDonald and Paul E. Hutchinson as the board of visitors. They are to make a report to the court.

Police Drag River For Bridge Jumper

Police were dragging the Allegheny River this afternoon near the Sixty-second Street Bridge for the body of an unidentified man who is reported to have jumped from the bridge about 1 o'clock. A crowd of more than 200 people lined the bank as the police searched for the body.

OFFICE RAIDER NEAR DEATH

Walter Goliat, whose skull was fractured early yesterday during a raid on the Oakland headquarters of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, was still regarded as in critical condition at West Penn Hospital today.

William McGraw, 22, of 237 Romeo street, one of the six defenders, has, police declare, admitted hitting Goliat on the head with a brick as he and the other raiders were fleeing from the place.

Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh said he would investigate the charges made by McGraw that Patrolman Edward Killeen, who witnessed the raid, made no attempt to capture the gangsters. Killeen would be suspended if the charges proved true, Walsh said.

Senator Coyne today disavowed any connection or sympathy with the attack on the Armstrong headquarters. He said:

"Any persons who would attempt to break up the headquarters of another candidate are no friends of mine. The men in the Armstrong headquarters have been my friends, and I have no quarrel with them. It is a sad situation if a candidate cannot open headquarters anywhere without being molested. Any one in Oakland can be for Armstrong and against me without fear of being attacked by blackguards."

Judge Stuns Constables By Listing 35 Vice Dens

Judge Frank P. Patterson, sitting for the "blind men's parade" today stunned Braddock and Duquesne constables when he made them stand aside, then handed them a list containing addresses of 35 alleged speakeasies and disorderly houses. He gave them until Monday to report.

The Judge withheld his surprise until after the constables of Pittsburgh and Braddock and Duquesne, in their quarterly report, had given their bailiwicks a clean bill of health.

The eyes of the "blind men" were first opened when Judge Patterson asked the Braddock and Duquesne constables to stand aside. After he submitted the list he said:

"If it is found on Monday that these are running and the constables say they are not, the constables will be liable to perjury before this court."

The list included complaints received by the court and a list handed in by Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Klunk.

County Detective Chief George W. Murren announced that county detectives would institute an investigation.

ARMED THUG GETS $1,100 PAYROLL

Bandit Hidden in Car Forces Firm Official to Drive to Highland Park, Escapes

A robber this afternoon held up Nathan Roth, of 5422 Wilkins ave., and robbed him of a $1,100 payroll of the Consolidated Cleaning Shops, Inc., Bryant street and North Euclid avenue, East End.

Roth, one of the owners of the Consolidated Shops, was forced to drive from the Peoples East End Savings and Trust Company, where he had obtained the money, to the Jackson street entrance of Highland Park, where the robber escaped.

HIDDEN IN CAR

The money was in small denominations.

Roth told police that the robber apparently had hidden in the rear of his automobile when he entered the bank.

When he entered the machine preparatory to returning to the shops in Bryant avenue, the robber, holding a pistol at Roth's back, said:

"Drive on until I tell you to turn."

Roth said he drove through the crowded East Liberty section to Sheridan avenue, where the robber, described as a white man between 35 and 40 years old, told him to turn, saying:

"If you do right and do carefully I won't hurt you."

THREATENED WITH GUN

The robber kept pressing the revolver between his shoulder blades, Roth said.

Turning into Sheridan avenue they moved toward Highland Park. At the Jackson street entrance Roth said he was told to stop. The robber left the machine after cautioning Roth to "stay there."

The robber fled down a hillside toward Stanton avenue and Roth reported the robbery to police.

7 Women and 14 Men On New Grand Jury

Judge James H. Gray today charges the September grand jury, consisting of seven men and 14 women. It will sit for a month. James Jones, 606 Sebring street, secretary of the Zenith Coal Company, was named foreman.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park said already 34 days' work is ahead, and these will have to be crowded into the month which the jury will sit.

ASK HOOVER AID FOR BLUEBEARD

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—President Hoover has been asked to intercede to obtain "justice" for Harry Powers, the Bluebeard slayer of West Virginia, it was learned today.

Counsel for the matrimonial agency Lothario wrote President Hoover complaining vigorously over the alleged third degree treatment accorded him, and demanding an investigation of the circumstances that led up to his purported confession.

The letter, signed by J. Ed Law, counsel for Powers, was merely acknowledged by a White House secretary and forwarded to the Department of Justice for whatever action is deemed advisable.

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 8.—Startling new developments in the case of Harry Powers were promised by authorities today with the grim searchlight of the law focused upon the wife and sister-in-law of the prisoner—Mrs. Lulu Powers and Miss Eva Belle Strother.

The women will be closely questioned today, Chief of Police Duckworth told International News Service.

In addition, an affidavit will be filed in court today, according to Sheriff Wilford B. Grimm, charging that Powers, alias Cornelius Pierson, defrauded Mrs. Dorothy

At the hospital her condition was listed as "serious."

MAN CAPTURED AFTER CHASE

A wild chase through Hazelwood streets, during which policemen fired more than a dozen shots, ended early today with the arrest of a man discovered in the Hazelwood Savings and Trust Company, Second and Hazelwood avenues.

At Hazelwood Police Station the prisoner said he was Cyril Kellar, 21, of 416 Flowers avenue. A short time later police went to the home of Gordon Flanagan, 30, of 4367 Chatsworth street, alleged to have been with Kellar a short time before the chase, and arrested him for questioning. Both men were charged with being suspicious persons. At a hearing Flanagan was discharged and Kellar was held for further investigation.

SEEK TO LINK JAPAN, U. S. BY AIR

Fog and Squalls in Path of Daring Fliers on Dash Across Ocean to Seattle

By JAMES R. YOUNG
International News Service.

TOKIO, Sept. 8.—In a reconditioned plane unequipped with radio, two daring American airmen were believed far out over the Pacific Ocean today on an attempt to link Japan and the United States in a nonstop flight, a feat never yet accomplished.

The adventurers were Don Moyle and Cecil A. Allen, young California fliers, who left Samushiro Beach at 5:30 a. m., Tokio time, today (4:30 p. m. Monday, Pittsburgh time), for Seattle, Wash., 4,465 miles distant.

Bidding for the $25,000 prize offered by the Tokio newspaper Asahi and other trophies posted for the first successful nonstop trans-Pacific flight, the aviators took advantage of the first favorable weather reports and turned their plane's nose out over the sea with an absolute absence of fanfare or ceremony.

STORMS IN PATH

One hour and 10 minutes after their departure, they swept over Cape Erimo and headed out over the uncharted aerial lanes of the Pacific. The powerful Ochi-Ishii wireless station in Tokio received the report of their sighting over Erimo and then announced it would be unlikely they would be heard from again until they reached the American coast, unless they happened across some steamer plying between the Orient and the Occident.

Serious obstacles in the way of unfavorable weather conditions lay in the path of the fliers both at the start and near the finish of their projected flight.

Dense fogs and rain squalls prevailed in the vicinity of the Kurile Islands, which lay ahead of Moyle and Allen immediately after passing Cape Erimo.

Hugh Herndon and Clyde Pangborn, Jr., who are planning to attempt a similar flight themselves, awaited with keen interest word of the progress of Moyle and Allen.

FACES JAIL TERM

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—A deferred 30-day jail sentence awaits the return here of Don Moyle, who with C. A. Allen, was en route today from Tokio on a flight to Seattle.

Moyle pleaded guilty in Superior Court here July 15 to a charge of driving while intoxicated and was sentenced to a month in jail, with three years' probation added. Attorney William G. Kenney asked for delay in the jail term, pointing out that Moyle and Allen had gone to considerable expense to arrange the ocean flight. Judge B. Rey Schauer accordingly agreed to make the term for the month of October.

Ex-Kaiser Ordered To Rehire Worker

POTSDAM, Germany, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Former Kaiser William, of Germany, was ordered by a court of this monarchial stronghold today to reinstate a discharged employe on his nearby estate of Bornstedt and pay legal costs.

The former Kaiser's bailiff dismissed the laborer, Franz Voss, for refusing to work overtime when he claimed he was sick. Voss sued for wages and reinstatement.

Lardner, Ill in Hospital, Writes Musical Comedy

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Unable to suppress his humor even in a hospital, Ring Lardner was busy working on a musical comedy today while convalescing from a nervous breakdown.

He has been in Doctors' Hospital for nearly a month. Dr. Cornelius J. Tyson, his physician, said today the humorist was winning his fight against "obstinate insomnia" and "lack of appetite" and he probably would be able to leave the hospital in a few weeks.

Dr. Tyson said Lardner had lost between 30 and 40 pounds during his illness, but in the last week had regained six. He said he had permitted the author to use his typewriter intermittently, "because he isn't happy unless he's working."

M'DONALD ASKS CONFIDENCE VOTE AS PARLIAMENT MEETS

LABORITES GET SETBACK AT OPENING

Henderson, Prime Minister In Clash; Session One Of Greatest in History

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS
International News Service

LONDON, Sept. 8.—Adhering to his previous declaration that the opposition government of which he is the head would demand a vote of confidence the first day of Parliament's session, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald demanded such a vote when the session the House of Commons was at hand today.

"The government desires at the end of the day to know whether it has the confidence of the House."

That was the message from the session of Parliament, a message from the man who, as Premier, said "the present national crisis makes this effort a necessity."

DECISIVE SESSION

The House of Commons was called to order at 2:45 p. m. today. It is generally believed that the session of the new Parliament of all the British Empire will be decisive.

The Labor members broke into applause as Arthur Henderson, who has replaced Mr. MacDonald as the Labor leader, arose and asked the Prime Minister for a statement of the business before the House.

Mr. MacDonald answered that a vote of confidence would be asked for. He said a program would be proposed outlining the length of debate. On Thursday he said Mr. Snowden would propose his supplementary budget and Friday would be devoted to a second reading of the economies bill.

PROTESTS RUSH

Mr. Henderson protested that such a motion as a vote of confidence was a "very bad beginning."

There were cheers from both sides as the first clash between Mr. Henderson and the old Labor chief arose.

Mr. MacDonald retorted:

"I am glad the gentleman admits that there is a crisis."

The Laborites suffered their first reverse in trying to block the government's program for the Speaker ruled that the House was gathered in exception circumstances and could not act according to precedent.

The Laborites demanded:

"Why? Why?"

The Speaker replied:

"Because there are no precedents."

Then Mr. MacDonald launched his formal declaration for the government and a statement of the national situation.

BRITISH ROYAL EXPENSES CUT

LONDON, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—The voluntary reduction in incomes announced by King George and the Prince of Wales as gestures of economy to the nation will necessitate drastic curtailment of certain state functions but the royal courts, dear to the hearts of American debutantes will not suffer, it was learned by International News Service today.

The courts held in the spring of each year are the least likely of any state functions to be subjected to economy measures. Such a step would seriously disrupt Britain's social life and would mean a loss of millions of dollars to dressmakers, merchants, florists and the tourist business as a whole.

While the nation hailed the action of King George in cutting his annual allowance by $250,000 it was conceded that the monarch faced a difficult task in carrying out their projected economies.

While the Prince of Wales receives no actual grant from Parliament, he is the recipient of a large income from the duchy of Cornwall. He informed Prime Minister MacDonald he would contribute about $50,000 to the national funds.

Lemke fifth victim of $15,000

The affidavit charges that the money belonging to Mrs. Lemke was transferred by Powers to the two women who knew the money was stolen and fraudulently obtained.

BLUEBEARD WORRIED

It is further set forth that Powers "feloniously slew, killed and murdered Mrs. Lemke and buried her body on premises owned by Eva B. Strother and Luella B. Powers and that after fraudulently obtaining the money, bonds etc. deposited it in his own name in the banking house of the Empire National Bank.

Powers, hearing of the court action in his veil, stopped his poker-playing with other prisoners and appeared worried for perhaps the first time since his arrest.

Sheriff Gumm through the filing of the affidavit in Chancery Court today intends to tie up the property which Powers is supposed to have appropriated from the Massachusetts widow. The Sheriff is the administrator of the estate of Mrs. Lemke.

VALUE SET AT $15,000

The suit, to be formally begun today with the filing of the affidavit, is brought against Harry F. Powers, Eva Strother and Luella Powers, trading and doing business under the firm name of Strother & Powers, their grocery stores; J. Ed. Law, counsel for Powers; and the Empire National Bank of Clarksburg.

The filing document also charges that Powers, by falsely and fraudulently promising to marry Mrs. Lemke and by representing himself as a man of great wealth and by deceit and intimidation obtained from Mrs. Lemke money, bonds and personal property to the value of $15,000 at least.

It is set forth that this money, specifically amounted to $4,287.22 and that $9,500 in bonds, stocks and jewelry were placed by Powers in a safety deposit box in the bank.

MURDER OF MAN HINTED

Discovery of a man's overcoat and straw hat among the clothing found in the home of Mrs. Powers today suggested to authorities that perhaps Powers had slain a man.

The hat was manufactured in Boston. Greek residents viewed the coat and hat, but were unable to identify them as belonging to Stamatios Sfikas, Greek shoe shine stand owner, who disappeared here June 10. Sfikas was a friend of Powers.

$661,809 P.R.R. TAX UPHELD

HARRISBURG, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania Railroad today was held liable to pay the commonwealth $661,809.34 in capital stock tax for the year 1923 by Judge John E. Fox in Dauphin County Court.

The suit centered about the railroad's claim of exemption from taxation on a New Jersey leasehold. Judge Fox held that the value of the leasehold was $19,575,574 and found it to be taxable as an intangible asset overruling the contention of the railroad that it was not taxable as a foreign asset.

Judge Fox held that the property is foreign, but the lease a Pennsylvania asset to the railroad.

Under a previous opinion Judge Fox held the value of the leasehold to be $25,204,947, but the Supreme Court disagreed and returned the case to the court here for determination of a new value.

91 Phila. Musicians Out in Wage Row

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Officials of the Musicians Protective Association said 91 musicians employed in Stanley-Warner Company theaters in Philadelphia did not report for work today as a result of the failure to reach a new agreement with the company concerning the number of men to be employed during the winter.

While officials of the company said they were inclined to look upon the action of the musicians as a strike, Adolph Hirschberg, president of the association, said it was a "lockout."

U. S. Explorer Hurt In Attack by Tiger

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—John S. Thaxter, an American citizen and a member of a scientific expedition to Matto Grosso, Brazil, was in a serious condition at a hospital here today as the result of an encounter with a tiger.

Thaxter, attacked by the beast while exploring in an isolated district, was found by other members of the expedition and taken to Asuncion by airplane.

Chicago Teachers Renew 'Love' Labor

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The big question in the minds of Chicago school teachers as they resumed work today after the summer vacation was:

"When will we get paid?"

Due to a tax muddle the pedagogues haven't been paid in money since the last of April. Some accepted scrip. The total due education employes is almost $12,000,000.

ITALY PROPOSES ARMS TRUCE

GENEVA, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Dino Grandi, Italy's foreign minister, proposed today at the League of Nations assembly an immediate truce in the building of armaments to continue through the period of the disarmament conference to be held next February.

His proposal evoked no demonstration of enthusiasm among the delegates but after he had finished speaking there was lively discussion of his suggestion in the lobbies. The German delegates particularly appeared to be well pleased.

Signor Grandi, reminding the assembly that the league covenant is only 12 years old urged the nations not to tinker with it too much until its real spirit is more firmly implanted.

His suggestion came shortly after the assembly had invited Mexico to become a member of the league.

Charges County Gets But 70 Cents Value for Dollar Spent on Improvements

Allegheny County taxpayers are getting only 70 cents worth of public improvements for every dollar spent, according to a statement made last night by County Commissioner C. C. McGovern, sole candidate for County Commissioner on the Independent Republican ticket he headed.

"More than $100,000,000 of your money was spent in the last eight years. Of that amount, $72,000,000 was spent from bond issues for big construction jobs.

"Just what did you get out of it? I'll tell you. Neither I nor any other living man knows how much was wasted and stolen through engineering bungles, through truck specifications and through contracts let to highest bidders. Disregarding all that, the best the taxpayers got out of it is $70,000,000 worth of public work for which you paid $100,000,000.

DOLLARS TO THE WINDS

"Why these shameful facts? Because in the eight eventful years Armstrong and his two henchmen, I. V. Babcock and Norman F. Brown, threw taxpayers' dollars to the winds. An average of 30 per cent has been added to the cost of all construction projects to pay for 'extras.' Nobody bids on 'extras.' That's a present to the contractors. Among those 'extras' is where the graft and waste are hidden.

"Sure, I admit that Armstrong spent $100,000,000 of the taxpayers' hard-earned money in eight years. Of the amount, $70,000,000 went for concrete, steel and labor. But $30,000,000 of it went. God knows where. I have a theory and when sent back as a majority commissioner with a colleague to help, I will work out that theory.

PREDICTS 50-50 SPLIT

"If the taxpayers of Allegheny County have so much money that they like to pay $1 for each 70 cents worth of public improvement they get, go ahead and elect Joseph G. Armstrong County Commissioner again. He'll likely raise the ante on you and so 'll be getting an even break of 50-50. Fifty cents of each taxpayer's dollar for you and 50 cents for 'extras.'

"Thirty-seven and one-half cents out of each dollar of taxes you pay into the county goes to pay interest on those bond issues Armstrong talks about. It will continue to go there for years to come, or until the debts are paid."

Dormont Fireman Hurt in Hose Fight

Suffering from injuries to his left eye received during a water battle between the Dormont and Mt. Lebanon volunteer firemen at Pioneer and West Liberty avenues, Dormont, yesterday, Ray Moore, 30, of 1413 Hillsdale avenue, Dormont, who was nozzleman during the battle, finished the contest, which ended in a draw. Moore was taken to the South Side Hospital, where it was stated he will be confined for several days. The full pressure of water was the cause of the accident, firemen said. The water battle was the closing event of the Dormont volunteer firemen's jubilee, which started last Wednesday.

POINT PLEASANT BRIDGE OPENED

POINT PLEASANT, W. Va., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—As a flock of pigeons fluttered into the air, the new Point Pleasant-Henderson bridge was dedicated by Gov. William G. Conley here.

The dedicatory address, delivered at ceremonies in Tu-Endie-Wei Park, climaxed an all-day program which included a parade through Point Pleasant streets, a barbecue and a band concert. Mrs. H. E. Shadle, wife of a member of the state bridge commission, released the 12 pigeons.

Governor Conley, introduced by Congressman Robert L. Hogg, pointed out that the bridge was the first built by the state bridge commission. It was built under a law permitting erection of toll bridges to be freed when tolls have been sufficient to pay for the construction.

boys who didn't know much. It would have been impossible for them to get anything of value or to do any damage. There was nothing taken."

Patrolman James O'Connor, reporting at the Hazelwood Station, was standing in front of the bank, which faces Second avenue, when he heard the crash of glass. A hasty investigation revealed a broken window on the rear of the building, on the Hazelwood avenue side.

SEES MAN ENTERING

Tossing his police call box keys to Thomas Obiecinus, of 4745 Second avenue, with whom he had been talking, and telling him to call the police station, O'Connor ran to the rear of the building in time to see a man climbing down into the bank from the window.

A few minutes later an emergency car arrived carrying Patrolmen Daniel Friel and Joseph Palmer. Palmer took up a station in front of the bank, Friel at the side, and O'Connor in the rear.

As Palmer ran to the front of the bank he observed a form inside running toward the front, arms upraised and with what appeared to be a length of pipe in his hand. Palmer fired through the window.

LEAPS INTO STREET

The man inside stopped, hesitated, then turned and ran to the rear of the room, up a flight of stairs to a mezzanine, used as the bookkeeping department and opening a window, leaped down into Osprey way, a narrow street.

O'Connor, watching several doors in the rear, saw him jump, and calling to his companions, gave chase to the fugitive, who ran up Osprey way to Hazelwood avenue.

The chase led up Hazelwood avenue to Chatsworth street and from that point for a distance of more than 10 blocks, ending at Hazelwood avenue and Chatsworth street, where O'Connor, a few feet ahead of Palmer and Friel, caught him. A quick search of the prisoner revealed a razor in his clothing, O'Connor said.

BANK EXITS GUARDED

Meanwhile emergency cars from the Oakland and Hazelwood districts arrived at the bank and guarded the broken exits.

Taken to the police station, the prisoner was questioned by Capt. John Barry and Lieuts. Richard Payne and William Fullerton. Soon afterward Capt. Barry ordered the arrest of Flanagan for questioning.

SMITH DEMANDS PARK CLEAR RECORD

Throws Down Gauntlet To District Attorney In Pointed Questions

Ralph H. Smith, "Independent" candidate for District attorney, today threw down the gauntlet to Andrew T. Park, incumbent seeking to retain the office, by demanding at the noon meeting in Independent Republican headquarters in Fourth avenue that he answer these 11 pointed questions:

"1. Why have you postponed the Kline case from 'the week of September 15' to 'sometime before Christmas?'"

CITES CURRAN CASE

"2. Why did you not investigate the Curran case, involving a racket murder close to your house and mine until asked to do so in the course of this campaign?"

"3. Why have you not reorganized the County Detective Bureau in view of more than 15 unsolved bombings and 16 unsolved racket murders occurring in Allegheny County since you took office on April 25, 1930?"

"4. In view of your statement on taking office that you 'would investigate every complaint against slot machine proprietors, gamblers and all other violators of the law,' how do you justify your instructions to Chief of Police Ralph Miller, of Dormont, to return the 1,000 lottery tickets and the names and addresses of almost 100 agents to John Cares, upon whose person they had been found and who boasted of his political influence?

"5—Why have you persistently refused to ask the aid of the state police in the investigation of bombings when you knew that the state police were ready to assist if you would ask them?"

HITS RACKETEERING

"6—Why did you permit open gambling for weeks and weeks in violation of the law at Bridgeville and at Aspinwall dog tracks until an aroused public opinion forced action?"

"7—Why have you hesitated to place before the grand jury the evidence of widespread frauds in the assessment of 50,000 fake voters in the present primary contest?

"8—How do you justify your continued support of James J. Coyne for County Commissioner in view of his inability to explain to the United States government the source of his income 'for fear it would tend to incriminate him;' his attack on the public schools system in the last session of Legislature, and his participation in election irregularities as indicated by the fact that his ward chairman has in the Treasurer's office approximately 14,000 tax orders in his name alone?

ATTACKS ALLIANCES

"9—How do you justify your continued support of Joseph G. Armstrong for County Commissioner in view of the award of the airport grading contract to the third highest bidder, who sublet the work to other contractors at the price submitted by the lowest bidder; the bungling of the Allegheny River boulevard with the consequent loss of another half million of the people's money; and his retention in office of members of the Tax Revision Board, which in the election two years ago permitted more than 40,000 'phantom voters' to be assessed and which has in this contest more than 50,000 fraudulent assessments on its books?

"10—Do you not believe that the District Attorney needs to do anything but handle the routine business of the office?

"11—How do you explain the nolle prossing of the Volpe case and their consequent interest in your campaign and your active association with them?"

Suspect Held Over In Bombing Attempt

Salvatore Guerino, 49, of 65 Marion street, arrested after an 11-year-old girl found a stick of dynamite with fuse attached on the window of the home of P. O. Chiochetti, 700 Vickroy street, yesterday, was held over after a partial hearing in Center Avenue Police Court today.

Police testified they had learned Guerino fired two shots at Chiochetti, following an argument last April, and was held for court. The case has not been tried. They said they believed the fuse had been lighted but had gone out. Lorma Horean, of 1317 Bluff street, found the dynamite.

Police Hear Girls Scream, Men Caught in Auto Chase

Two West Virginians and one man from Detroit were being held in the East Pittsburgh Police Station on a serious charge after a wild chase through the borough streets early today, which resulted in their capture after a policeman was knocked from the running board of their machine.

Two young Braddock girls will appear against the men before Burgess James Beech in East Pittsburgh tonight. Police said one of the girls suffered the loss of three teeth when one of the men struck her as she attempted to leap from the automobile.

According to the police, Night Sergt. Gordon N. Cargo, on duty at the station house, rushed from the borough building when he heard the girls scream. He was knocked off the running board when he attempted to aid the girls, but was uninjured. Chief of Police Frank Kelly in the tender of a motorcycle driven by Patrolman John Hanlon, captured the trio after a pursuit of several blocks.

The men arrested are Henry Sopitz, 21, of Detroit, owner of the Illinois licensed machine; Frank Amelio, 23, and Sam Olmia, 25, both of Chester, W. Va.

Film Queens Visit Prison; See Ex-Foes Reconciled

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Asa Keyes, former District Attorney of Los Angeles, and his successor, Buron Fitts, who prosecuted and sent him to prison, have shaken hands in the prison yard of San Quentin.

Fitts, accompanied by his wife and a party, including the motion picture actresses Louise Fazenda and Marion Marsh, were inspecting the prison yesterday. Fitts suddenly excused himself and intercepted a figure in prison gray hurrying across the yard.

"Why, hello, Buron."

"Hello, Ace; how are you?"

Without hesitation both men shook hands and chatted. Fitts later said:

"Ace has hown himself a real man. He has taken his punishment without a whimper."

The former District Attorney, sentenced for bribery conspiracy in connection with the Julian oil cases, has been given a parole and has but six more weeks to serve. He will fight for reinstatement to the California Bar Association.

WILKINS SAFE IN SPITZBERGEN AFTER ARCTIC CRUISE

SUB BATTERED BY POLAR ICE PACKS

Explorer Heeds Warning To Abandon Attempts In Reaching Far North

International News Service.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 8.—The polar submarine Nautilus, of Sir Hubert Wilkins, arrived at Long Year City, Spitzbergen, at 1 o'clock this afternoon after a perilous cruise in Arctic waters, according to messages received in this city today.

The reports said that the submarine had been considerably damaged since it left Spitzbergen.

The Nautilus started her cruise toward the pole on August 18 when she left Long Year City alone. Three days later she radioed she had entered the zone of the ice pack and she would press on despite a minor mechanical defect.

There followed several days of silence during which men who knew the North felt grave concern for the safety of the expedition. Rescue vessels were equipped and made ready for a search, but before they got under way Sir Hubert's radio spoke again.

His return at this time follows the advice of many friends who warned against proceeding further toward the pole at this time of year.

OFFICERS FIRED, POLITICS SEEN

Two Braddock policemen were reported discharged today in a shakeup of the department, the cause of which was described to two sources economy and because they had been supporting State Senator James J. Coyne's candidacy for County Commissioner.

Burgess James H. Rose said he was out of town yesterday and did not know whether the men had been dismissed. The chief of police was in Pittsburgh and other officers would not comment.

The men said to have been discharged are Lieut. Edward McDonough and Patrolman Joseph McLaughlin.

McDonough's brother, George, and McLaughlin's brother, Cornelius, are running for Justice of the Peace offices in the borough against incumbents. George McDonough is a Coyne supporter.

LEGION CALLS HUGE RELIEF CONVENTION

Governors, Mayors, Leaders Of Capital and Labor to Assemble Next Monday

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—With the White House deaf to the pela of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, for a national conference of employers and employes to discuss labor conditions, it was announced here today by the American Legion that plans have been completed for a general conference here next Monday, September 14 under Legion auspices.

The conference Legion officials said will concern itself with "unemployment and the economic situation" and will be attended by governors, mayors and representatives of labor, capital and industry.

Invitations to mayors were limited to the 15 largest cities of the country, and to several others where large public projects for employment relief have been instituted. Labor leaders and officers of the United States Chamber of Commerce have been invited, National Commander Ralph T. O'Neil said.

"The full strength and influence of the legion will be offered to the committee recently appointed by the president and to all municipal, state and other governmental agencies to be used in helping relieve the present unemployment conditions."

"One main purpose of the conference is to get ideas and suggestions that will enable the Legion's National Employment Commission to be most effective. We believe the Legion through its many posts can be very effective in helping solve this very serious problem which now confronts out nation. It is our intention to co-operate with all existing agencies, both public and semi-public. I have called this conference at this time so that the suggestions and ideas we receive can be submitted by our employment commission to the national convention to be held in Detroit, September 21-24. We believe the Legion will be able to increase employment during the coming winter and also help to outline a program that may be of some permanent benefit during any period of depression."

GIRL DISCIPLE LAUDS GANDHI AS MYSTIC

English Woman Companion Explains Attraction to 'Prophet'; Cites Snub

By EDITH HOWITT

International News Service.

ABOARD S. S. RAJPUTANA, Sept. 8.—A new-found religious fervor prompted Miss Madeline Slade, daughter of a British admiral, to renounce a life of ease to devote herself to the service of Mahatma M. K. Gandhi, the attractive English girl revealed to International News Service today.

Journeying to London with Gandhi to attend the round table conference, Miss Slade told how she had to come to shave her head, to wear coarse cotton garments and to spend every moment of her waking hours waiting upon the little man who is attempting to lead India's millions to freedom.

EXPLAINS ATTRACTION

Miss Slade declared her attraction to Gandhi was purely a "religious one." She said:

"All religions are equally good. I did not change mine to join the Nationalist movement, because before adopting Gandhi-ism I had no religious beliefs.

"Now I am happy and peaceful in mine. Life is not hard. My inspiration carries me over any difficulties that present themselves.

"The modern world is materialistic. It needs the leavening of mysticism. Gandhi is a practical mystic."

The criticism of those who think it is unusual for a cultured English girl to embrace Hinduism and become the servant of a "prophet" has not affected Miss Slade's enthusiasm for her calling.

RAPS BRITISH RULE

She said:

"I have not suffered from ostracism. This is the first time in six years that I have associated with Europeans, but I feel absolutely no desire to return.

"The British are acceptable to India if they will treat Indians on equal terms but they acquire a superiority complex.

"My brother-in-law, really the most decent fellow, became autocratic through 15 years association with the civil service India. I visited him in Madras, and found he wasn't the least anxious to advertise his relationship with me."

Shortly after the Rajputana left Port Said, it was learned from a reliable source that French authorities were not anxious to allow Gandhi transit across France and may refuse him permission to land at Marseilles. The Mahatma had no comment to make on the report, but dismay was plainly discernible among members of his party.

GERMANS HEAR NEW JOB PLAN

BERLIN, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—A homestead project which by the end of next year would be expected to enable 100,000 unemployed persons now receiving support from the public welfare to provide for themselves was submitted to the cabinet by Finance Minister Hermann Dietrich.

The finance minister proposed the construction of "siedlungen" or settlements, which would be situated near the cities on land turned over by the states and municipalities. The building materials for these "siedlungen" would be supplied by the government, the wood for instance to be taken from the federal forest preserves.

One condition of ownership would be that the tenant himself would help build his home, with the assistance of others of the unemployed who would get the "dole" and food in return for their services.

Mayor of Boston Orders 5-Day Week

BOSTON, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—A five-day week beginning January for all city employes other than those of fire, police and institution departments had been announced today by Mayor James M. Curley.

Mayor Curley advocated demands that a $5,000,000,000 federal prosperity loan be appropriated to relieve the sufferings of the unemployed and attacked the policy of President Hoover of appointing commissions to investigate various conditions.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—President Hoover returned to the White House shortly before 9 o'clock today from his Rapidan camp where he had spent the week-end.

He was accompanied by James R. Garfield, of Cleveland, a member of the President's relief committee, and Henry M. Robinson, a California banker.

The Chief Executive went immediately to his office.

WALKER, IRAQ KING TO MEET

CANNES, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, gave a few minutes of his time today to study a map of Asia in anticipation of his scheduled meeting with King Feisal of Iraq.

Shortly after he arrived here from Paris Mayor Walker was informed that the Iraquian potentate, one of the most romantic and prominent figures in Col. T. E. Lawrence's famous book on Arabia, was due here tomorrow and had expressed a desire to meet him.

Mayor Walker's first question was:

"Where is Iraq?"

Meanwhile, with the Mayor vigorously denying that political favors had anything to do with his being decorated by France as commander of the Legion of Honor, the French Foreign Office in Paris explained it was "entirely a question of protocol governing the reception of distinguished foreigners." At the headquarters of the legion it was said there was no relation in connection with the reward.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 8.—Discharge of shotgun shells in a clothes press during a fire in the Hartley Inn, Carmichaels, early today probably saved the lives of Frank J. Williams and his son, Lawrence, the only occupants of the three-story building.

The first of 15 shells which exploded in the pockets of hunting jackets in the press awakened Lawrence and he awakened his father. The son dashed down a smoke-filled stairway and his parent, proprietor of the inn, was taken down a ladder from the second-story window.

He came from Cleveland in 42 minutes and planned, after a brief stop, to reach New York in less than an hour and three-quarters.

He will return here Friday to take part in dedicating the new field. Asked about his plans to regain the speed crown, he said:

"I'd rather not say anything about that right now. I'll be back Friday for the opening and I might have something to say then."

CHILE REBELS YIELD FLEET

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—Capitulation of Chile's naval rebels after a revolt that cost between 50 and 100 lives and nearly precipitated a civil war made complete today when the mutineers surrendered the fleet of which they took possession in Coquimbo harbor a week ago.

The battle cruiser De la Torre, flagship of the mutinous fleet, was turned over to federal troops at Tongay, north of Coquimbo. The other cruisers, submarines and destroyers seized by the rebels were to be handed over to the authorities at Valparaiso and other ports.

While naval, military and air force officers were superintending the return of the fleet into loyal hands, the Chilean government, under Acting President Manual Trucco, made preparations for a wholesale military court martial to deal with the leaders of the uprising, alleged to have been of Communistic origin.

A "council of war" was inaugurated and rebel leaders were ordered to attend to discuss with government officials terms of settlement and determine responsibility for the insurrection.

Headed "The Al Capone of Europe," the cartoon showed Premiere Pierre Laval and Foreign Minister Aristide Briand of France sitting in the "office of the French racket" with their feet up on a huge table.

On the walls were maps of Germany, Austria, Hungary and Jugoslavia, surrounded by funeral wreaths. At the back of the room was a bench on which sat French bankers caricatured as gunmen.

Briand was shown in the act of telephoning with a "henchman."

"Wassatt?" he was asking. "Some guys muscling in our territory? Bump 'em off, kid, bump 'em off."

Bigamist Pledged to Talk In Insurance Death Hoax

PERRY, Ia., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—County Attorney George Sackett said today that John M. Smith, insecticide manufacturer, has promised to tell a grand jury the details of an alleged insurance plot in which he disappeared last winter, leaving the embalmed body of an unidentified man in his burned automobile.

The County Attorney made this statement after officers reported Mrs. Smith had signed a statement admitting her husband's disappearance was part of a plan whereby she was to collect his $50,000 in life insurance policies.

Smith, who once was the candidate of the Farmer-Labor party for governor of Iowa, was held in jail at Adel, while his wife was in custody of state agents at Des Moines.

Mrs. Smith was quoted in the statement as saying:

"Under our plan, I was to collect the insurance and then meet John when he got into communication with me, which might be one to two years."

Mrs. Smith's statement, the officers said, cleared up other angles of the case, including a bigamous marriage by her husband to Pauline Shaw, an 18-year-old Elgin (Kan.) girl.

Poisoned Pigeon Pets Rain From New York Sky

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Most of the famous pigeons of St. Paul's Chapel, pets of stenographers and business men in the financial district, are dead or fled, victims of poison. Many rained from the sky the other afternoon, their wings stilled.

Czarina, famous wherever picture postcards are sent because her proud white plumage was caught by a photographer when she sat on a high ledge of the Woolworth Building during the reign of that edifice as the tallest in the world, was the first to satisfy the poisoner's whim.

She swooped to the ground from a lofty perch and tottered before a Broadway street car. The motorman jammed on his brakes. A policeman and pedestrian rushed to her just as she expired.

Then came another and another. A crowd gathered. High above could be seen pigeons on window sills in obvious distress and their cooing could be heard above the traffic din.

Policeman William Magnussen counted 32 dead on the ground.

Courtney disclosed that Walf told him he wanted to "get another woman for his brother Henry," as an inducement to be able to trade two automobiles. He suggested the name of Edith Gregory and secured her consent. She never had any interest in the account.

VETS TO FIGHT FOR PENSIONS TO FAMILIES

Legion Convention to Ignore Administration's Plea for Delay in Fund Demands

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The American Legion at its Detroit convention will reject the plea of administration spokesmen to suspend its fight for further aid involving Treasury expenditures if the will of state conventions is carried out, a survey disclosed today.

Instead, there will be demands for pensions for widows and orphans an assault upon the "pauper clause" in relief measures, liberalization of the World War veterans' compensation act and expansion of hospitals.

PROHIBITION ISSUE

The fight for cash payment of the bonus and prohibition will have strong backing. Many delegates will go to Detroit pledged to vote for the payment of the adjusted compensation certificates and at least three department delegations will seek action on prohibition.

Since Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of veterans' affairs, made an appeal to veterans not to seek further aid because of the government's financial condition, other administration speakers have carried similar pleas to state gatherings.

Hanford MacNider, minister to Canada, has appealed to Legion conventions in many states to avoid politics and has advised against action on prohibition.

New York and the District of Columbia will demand repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, while Illinois adopted a resolution for a national referendum on prohibition.

BAR ON REDS URGED

The 10 oldtimers this far compiled show a big majority demanding pensions for widows and orphans of service men dying from non-service connected causes. The proposed pension is $30 for the widow and $6 for each child.

The "pauper clause" idea has stirred the ire of Legionnaires in many states.

The Pennsylvania department adopted a resolution barring Communists from membership. Several state bodies, including Illinois, called for federal action against Communists.

Among the resolutions of the Texas convention was a demand that the government discharge all married women whose husbands are able to support them.

FIGHT PAUPER CLAUSE

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 8. (AP)—Steps to place the United Spanish War Veterans on record as being unalterably opposed to "pauper" or "needs" clauses in Federal Pension legislation were taken at the annual convention of the organization here.

Reunions ranging from nurses who saw service in Cuba in 1898 to a handful of Theodore Roosevelt's San Juan Rough Riders took the place of business sessions. Tonight the military ball will be held.

We Now Present

By Darrell V. Martin
Radio Editor

THE SPIRIT OF conquest conveyed in the ringing Triumphal March from "Aida," with its mental picture of regal pomp and splendor, always finds appropriate expression in that grandest of solo instruments, the pipe organ . . . you will find it highly stimulating on WJAS at 10:30 tonight when it is played by Vincent H. Percy as part of the dedication program for new WHK studios in Cleveland . . . If speeches are held to a minimum and the musical program follows the announced schedule the celebration should be a success, and indeed the new WHK studios deserve a grand sendoff! . . . they're gorgeous . . . Los Angeles continues to celebrate its one hundred and fiftieth anniversary with a La Fiesta on KDKA at midnight, featuring the city's police band and other splendid talent . . . the program is billed to last two hours . . . Alfred Wallenstein contributes a cello solo of Cui's "Orientale" to the Virtuoso concert on WCAE at 8:30 and we know you will not regret our recommendation of Alice Mock and the male chorus on KDKA at 9 in a splendid repertoire . . . the War Thriller on WCAE at 9 dealing with the discovery of a spy in the World War should hold interest, as also a dramatization of the defeat of Burgovne at Saratoga on KDKA at 9:30.

PIGEON RANSOM 'VICTIM' FOUND

HARRISBURG, Sept. 8 (AP)—Edgar F. Hackleton, Jr., New York who was picked up by Pennsylvania Railroad police here yesterday, has been taken by his parents to their home in New York, the railroad police announced today. The boy had been hitch hiking across the country.

The boy was in New Orleans or Mobile railroad police said, when he learned through newspapers about the efforts to obtain ransom money from his parents for his return. He immediately started to return by hitch-hiking and blind baggage. He carried a newspaper with a story about the "pigeon kidnapers" with a picture of himself. He had no money.

Police notified his parents, who arrived by automobile and took him home.

BEAUTY PARLOR GIRL SLAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 8 (AP)—Miss Evelyn Danielson, 22, operator of a beauty parlor, was found shot to death last night in the one-room apartment of Patrick Gavin, 31, a city plumbing inspector.

Gavin, who informed police of Miss Danielson's death, said he did not know whether she shot herself or was slain by someone else. Coroner Herman N. Bundesen said the girl had been dead for more than 10 hours and that from the position of the wounds she could not have killed herself. She was shot three times.

Gavin told detectives he left Miss Danielson alive yesterday morning and that when he returned the girl was dead. The police found Gavin's wife at another address. She and Gavin's brother-in-law, Clarence Brinkley, were taken to a police station for questioning.

Many Sleepless Nights on Account of Skin Trouble. Cuticura Healed.

"I was bothered with skin trouble for a period of more than six months. Large red pimples broke out on my face and disfigured it. When I squeezed them it did not do any good. The itching and burning were very severe, and I had many sleepless nights on account of them.

"I tried many different remedies which brought no relief whatever. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they helped me. I purchased more and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Mary Buchoveckey, 522 Virginia Ave., Johnstown, Pa., March 4, 1931.

Trust no Substitute
because it
"looks like Kotex"

MANY substitutes look like Kotex. But few offer anything like the exact hygienic purity of Kotex ... the rapid thirst-like absorbency ... the downright comfort ... This is why Kotex is the choice of hospitals ... Why take chances, ever? Kotex is available everywhere ... just in case you're a Kotex ... your first ... sanitary pad. You'll like Kotex. But how about ... substitutes of which you know nothing? How are they made? Where? Would hospitals sanction them? Would you, if you knew their origin?

Why take chances, ever? Kotex is available everywhere ... just in case you're a Kotex ...

Kotex is wonderfully soft. It is shaped to deodorize. Absorbs 5 times as much as a cotton pad. Disposable. Wear it on either side. Do not flush in toilet.

Second Registration Here Being Guarded by State Police

whom they were to be served were not disclosed.

Before 11 o'clock it became apparent that the 66,061 registrations, the highest ever listed on an initial registration day in Pittsburgh, was a fair criterion of the fall vote. Registration Commission employes said the September 15 vote probably would reach perhaps pass 200,000 if the present rate of registration continues tonight and Saturday, the final day.

MEHARD SEEKS LIST

Gen. Churchill B. Mehard, counsel for the Registration Commission, has requested County Treasurer John Francies and Delinquent Tax Collector Walter J. Christy to furnish him with a list of persons who had obtained "wholesale" lots of tax receipts.

When the court was hearing the Allegheny County Bar Association's petition to force the Board for Revision and Assessment of Taxes to certify their additional assessment lists, Arthur Drumm, an employe of Francies, testified that 845 persons had obtained more than 32,000 tax receipts. This number, Mehard said, has increased greatly since that time.

The names of persons for whom "wholesale" receipts were obtained, Mehard said will be scrutinized closely for possible evidence of fraudulent registration.

MAN QUESTIONED

Soon after Mehard's request was made, a man was brought before the commissioners by two of their investigators. His name was withheld, but it was understood that he was from the First District of Second Ward and had in his possession a tax receipt with the address of 127 Sixth street intact, but with the name of the person to which it had been issued erased and another substituted.

At the same time, John M. Henry of the Bar Association's Committee on Election Frauds was in Francies' office with a corps of assistants checking tax orders for possible "phantoms" among the "wholesale" receipts.

Registration officials said today that two men "phantom voters" or repeaters, had fraudulently registered in the home district of Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, the Second district of the Fourteenth ward.

Mrs. M. J. Clark of 1035 Murtland avenue reported to the commission that two men giving their names as Tony Raffele and Ruben Abram had registered in the Second district as lodgers at her home. She never heard of either before, she said.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park said:

"I will prosecute any cases the Registration Board brings before me. I have offered the entire staff of county detectives to the Registration Board for any use they may wish to put them.

"We already have two cases of forgery on assessments to be submitted to the September grand jury."

MORROW WITH TROOPERS

Chairman John K. Morrow, of the Registration Commission, accompanied by three state troopers, went to a registration place in the rear of 201 South Mathilda street early today to oust Sarah J. Rice, of 243 South Mathilda street, a registrar in the Tenth District of the Eighth Ward, dismissed after Thursday's registration. Arriving there, he found that Miss Rice had not been notified of her dismissal and that her successor, Anthony Bower, Jr., of 201 South Mathilda street, had not been notified of his appointment.

Morrow then told Miss Rice to serve with the board today, but left J. Louis Doner, a registration commission employe, there with orders to bring all of the district board's books into the commission office tonight.

Immediately after the polls close tonight the Registration Commission's investigators will check the books turned in from wards in which "phantom vote" fraud is suspected.

McGovern conferred yesterday with members of the Registration Commission.

Registrars will sit at the polling again tonight from 5 to 11 o'clock and Saturday from 8 to 11 a. m. and from 5 to 11 p. m., daylight saving time.

KELLY FAVORS 5 BILLION LOAN

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 8 (United Press)—The $5,000,000,000 bond issue suggested in the prosperity plan of William Randolph Hearst is the only answer to this emergency of economic depression, declared Representative Clyde Kelly of Braddock, Pa., speaker of the Labor Day session of the silver jubilee convention of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks.

Congressman Kelly declared he had been for the "prosperity plan" from the beginning and said:

"Mr. Hearst's plan for the bond issue would start the cycle upward, which is the imperative necessity of the situation.

"During the war we provided billions of dollars to meet an emergency which was no greater than this economic depression we face, with six or seven million men out of work in our country.

"We are the richest country in the world and have unlimited resources. The plan to provide $5,000,000,000 can easily be carried out. We have plans and specifications for public buildings and improvements of rivers and harbors that can be proceeded with immediately."

How One of Allegheny County's Leading Business Men Expresses His Opinion of

Senator W. D. MANSFIELD

TO THE CITIZENS OF ALLEGHENY COUNTY:

Wm. D. Mansfield is running for the nomination of County Commissioner. This is the County's most important office.

I have known Mr. Mansfield since 1895, when he came from a farm near Coultersville, on the Youghiogheny River, to McKeesport seeking employment, willing and ready to work at any salary offered him to get started, so that he could prove his ability. At that time he was about eighteen years of age.

That same day he obtained employment and while I never knew what his salary was, I am sure that he was not overpaid. In less than a year, Mr. Mansfield was in business for himself and has been his own Manager ever since.

Mr. Mansfield is not a College man but he is a graduate of the School of Experience, a course that no College teaches.

Some people who do not know Mr. Mansfield, think that because he is a State Senator he is a high powered politician. This is not so as he is a very sound and progressive business man and a Bank Director.

His home life is moral and his character is of the very best.

Mr. Mansfield knows the value of money and will not gamble with the Tax Payers' money. With his honesty, leadership and ability, he will discover a way to reduce taxes and Tax Payers will receive full value for the money they pay for taxes.

If you want to elect a County Commissioner, with an absolutely clean record, one who is capable of filling any office in the State of Pennsylvania, vote for Wm. D. Mansfield, who will fill this responsible position as County Commissioner to your entire satisfaction.

Hoping that Mr. Mansfield will receive your support, I am

Yours very truly,

VOTE MACHINE FIGHT LOOMS

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Sept. 8.—Notwithstanding the fact that Secretary of the Commonwealth Richard J. Beamish has decided to make a test case on the voting machine law and is advertising for machines for the Borough of Philipsburg in Centre County, the Centre County Board of County Commissioners is standing pat on its declaration against the purchase or payment for the machines if they are delivered on the orders of the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

The Commissioners have not decided on the course they will pursue but are considering notifying the firm which may be awarded the contract by the Secretary of the Commonwealth that they will not authorize the use of the machines by the voters of Philipsburg Borough, and will not pay for any machines delivered on any order but their own. With the Commissioners assuming this standpoint it is quite likely the court will have to pass on the question.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

Pals to the End

THE FRIENDSHIP between Henry and John was as rare as it was touching. In these days of self-promotion, it may be a trifle hard to understand such a glorious companionship. Yet it existed. And, although both men advanced to success in their respective lines, their close association never faltered.

As usual, I'm getting ahead of myself. Let's go back to the day that both men graduated from college. Of the same age and possessing practically the same likes and dislikes, Henry and John had been inseparable since their freshman days. They had worked together, gone out with the same collegiate damsels, studied together—and grown wiser together. And here they were, four years later, at the parting of the ways.

Henry was going to enter a Wall street firm with the idea of some day owning a brokerage house of his own. John's path was vastly different. He was going to embark on a stage career. It was the one thing he had always dreamed about; the one thing he had always wanted. And he was going to make a stab at success in that direction.

A few hours before they were scheduled to leave the two men sat on a bench in a corner of the campus. John spoke first.

"Hank," he asserted, "let's not go into any long-winded speeches about our regard for each other. I'd bust up and so would you. Rather than do that, I'd like to make some sort of a pledge with you on the other end. And then we'll both shake and call it quits."

Henry nodded.

"As usual, John," he replied, "you're right. It's pretty tough to think that these swell years of our lives now form a part of the past. But that's the way they go. And now, before I get the creeps, what sort of a pledge have you in mind?"

John hesitated.

"Well," he murmured, "I don't know exactly how to put it, but I'll do my best. I think you're the swellest guy I ever knew, and even if I never have another friend, I think I've had my share. Plenty of friends make promises when they leave college, but the world changes their viewpoints in later years and the promises are seldom kept. I want us to be just a little different.

"Suppose we take a vow that, no matter what happens, we'll still be the same friends. And that, regardless of what fate has in store for us, we'll always be truthful with each other. How does that strike you?"

Henry's hand shot out.

"Swell, John," he replied. . . .

As I told you in the opening paragraph, and which should prove conclusively what a poor story-teller I really am, both men made rapid strides in the right direction. Within five years John was one of the most promising young actors on Broadway. And Henry was climbing in excellent fashion in the Wall street sector.

Their parting on graduation day had been as most of them are, a little too dramatic. They had never lost track of each other for any extensive periods of time. As a matter of fact, their friendship after the college days was just as solid as it had been before graduation.

In due time, John found himself a bride. And a swell bit of femininity she was, too. She was playing the ingenue lead in one of John's vehicles, and John was playing the boy friend. As soon as the play closed they decided to carry the idea into their private lives. And so they became, as the saying goes, man and wife.

Henry, of course, was best man. The girl respected the great friendship of these two men and evidently loved her husband the more for it. Henry was just as welcome in John's home after marriage as he had been before it. True to their vow, nothing could disturb their fine companionship.

When John's wife a few months later, found it necessary to take to the road in a play with which her husband was not connected, it was she who suggested that Henry live in their home while she was away. And it was she who, after she returned from the road, urged John to invite Henry to whatever function they were attending.

Thus, the friendship of these three was the talk of all Broadway. It was one of those things you often read about—but very seldom see.

Into each life, as the wise men had it, some rain must fall. In John's case, however, they went the wise men a little better and gave him a deluge. From somewhere a little bird popped out and whispered something he found it terribly hard to believe.

It was only natural that he should take Henry into his confidence immediately. He asked his only pal if he had heard rumors that his wife had been unfaithful. Henry hesitated. Then he placed a hand on the actor's shoulder.

"It's true, John," he replied bluntly. "I know that it will hurt you like the devil and God knows that I don't want to hurt you. But I, too, have heard the same rumors.

"I'm telling you now only because of the vow we took the day we graduated. It's tough, John, but I'm afraid the rumors are true. . . .

I'm not going to describe John's reactions, nor his hurt, nor his ensuing scenes with his wife. Sufficient to relate that he decided to sue her for divorce and that she did nothing more than shrug her shoulders.

"You can do as you wish," she told him coolly. "I'll not stand in your way, but I won't lift a finger to help you. If you can get your divorce, go to it. But don't bother me with it."

Once more John went to his devoted pal. He broke down now and he cried over the girl's coldness. But, he said, he was determined to divorce her. And how, he wanted to know, could it be done without the slightest evidence?

Henry proved himself the most unusual of all men. He said that he would be willing to take the stand and say that he had been unduly friendly with his friend's wife. The world would call him names. He knew that. But what did he care for the world as compared to the friendship of John?

And so it was arranged. In due time, the case was called and Henry took the stand. With lowered eyes, he swore that he had betrayed John's trust. There could be no question of the outcome. The judge would grant an absolute divorce in the specified time.

The two men left the court together. John's voice was strangely choked.

"Henry," he said, "you've been marvelous. Never did one man have another pal such as you. Only one thing hurt me terribly. And that was the fact that you had to be untruthful on the witness stand. You swore you were friendly with my wife. And untruthfulness had no part in our vow."

Henry looked at his pal. And over his face crept a sweet, sympathetic smile.

"Don't feel so badly, John," he murmured happily. "Everything is all right. I didn't break our vow at all. I told the truth!"

Studios Abolishing Choruses Upon Return of Melody To Sound Screen

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 8

Hundreds of dancers, now out of work in Hollywood, have had their hopes dashed by an announcement from William LaBaron that Radio Pictures will abolish choruses in their new musical productions.

Charles Einfeld wires me that I was misquoted in reporting that Warners were holding up Walter Huston's picture "The Ruling Voice" because it had six main scenes. On the contrary, the picture will be released October 31 . . . the heart-stuffered Clark Gable has a dozen volumes of poetry in his dressing room and in each there are underlined passages which he likes best . . . NOW IT'S BOLES

With Spencer Tracy set to replace Edmund Lowe as Sergeant Quirt in "Disorderly Conduct," Fox has signed John Boles for the other Lowe picture, "Cheating Lilinda Watkins," Fox debutante star, has the feminine lead.

I don't know the details, but Boles was supposed to go Murders in the Rue Morgue before he quit Universal. Maybe there will have to be a new arrangement for this film.

Clive Brook's 'Silence' Is Golden

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Once again we have a screen drama that shows what a dramatist can do for Hollywood and also shows what an actor can do for a picture. Max Marcin is the dramatist, and Clive Brook is the actor, and the picture is called "Silence." It can be seen and heard at the Warner—though it sounds strange to say you can see "Silence" or hear it.

George Seibel.

Marcin, who is a specialist in ripe melodramas, has made a thrilling one with at least three novel turns to his plot. He got one hint from that well-known one-act agony, "The Valiant," and he got another suggestion from an old play by L. N. Parker called "The Cardinal," but these are just the seed of a really good story told in a really dramatic way.

The story is about a criminal whose better nature triumphs over his vicious training. They say it does, and the makers of melodrama would be lost if it didn't.

BROOK'S FINE WORK

But this picture is lifted far above melodrama by the fine work of Clive Brook, that intelligent and sincere English actor. It is the most genuine emotional work Brook has done in his whole screen career. In fact, there are moments when he is superb, when he reminds you of E. S. Willard.

And there is a fine actress who shares much of the honor with him—though of course she no longer plays what are called "leads." Marjorie Rambeau runs a saloon and loves Clive in a perfectly convincing way.

A scandal sheet with an unscrupulous proprietor, a delightful kitten who unravels some of the plot, a series of fine photographic moments, and very good acting by everybody concerned—that is a bit of a taste of "Silence."

It is worth while—do not miss it.

CHIC SALE ALSO

Besides the feature film there is a capital comedy with Chic Sale in an uproarious characterization as a lazy ne'erdowell whose idiocies take him further than the go-getter his brother-in-law.

And clever Walt Disney has a Mickey Mouse drama that would make the mummy of Pharaoh laugh if he hadn't been drowned in the Red Sea and never found.

Statesman

George Arliss appears in a historical characterization in "Alexander Hamilton," screen attraction coming next week to the Warner.

'Ten Nights' Is Menke Drama

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Ten Nights in a Barroom," of the kind that Capt. Menke's Golden Rod stage crew at Montrose rigged up for the customers last night, never will make prohibition any more effective than it is at present. The customers, at least those in the audience, got too much enjoyment from it. Joe Morgan and Sample Switchel seemed to find the likker of Landlord Slade a little too fiery for real sociability, not so the audience.

While the two worthies mentioned appeared to get mean results from their potations, the folks out front were having the time of their lives. They were so intent on having a good time that Joe's daughter, Mary, came to a miserable end. She didn't die happy, poor girl.

Not that she didn't have plenty of helpful suggestions from the audience—far from it. But that meant she just had to work that much harder to reach the sweet hereafter, where there ain't no likker, and there is enough quiet and tranquility for a child to recite all her lines and have done with a demise that is to be a lesson to her earnestly drinking daddie.

Poor Joe! We doubt if he got the full benefit of that pathetic departure. We judged he didn't because he promised, just as his little girl was being hauled into the great hence, that never again would he touch "a drop of intoxicating liver."

Landlord Slade had his troubles, too. Among them was the deprivation of the assistance of his fine son Frank, until the time came for Frank to ease the old gent into the next world. Frank just couldn't get on the job in the first part of the show because he was Willie Hammond then. But as soon as Willie joined the caravan bound for the hereafter Frank was able to officiate in a fatal capacity in behalf of his old man.

Words can mean lots of things—but you can always trust your taste. If a cigarette tastes right, if it satisfies you right down to the ground, then it is right.

There are all kinds of tobaccos—some good, some not so good. And there's the Chesterfield kind—the best Turkish and the best Domestic that grows. Full-ripe, sun-cured, aged in Nature's thoroughgoing way—and as mild and smooth and sweet as sun-ripened fruit. Chesterfields taste right — because they are right.

And something you can't taste—that's important too! The finest cigarette paper—so pure it burns without taste or odor!

And behind this unchanging good taste, all the resources of a great organization—men, money, science, experience. It takes them all to make a great cigarette, and they're all behind Chesterfield.

Your taste is dead right. Chesterfields do satisfy.

'Last Flight' Odd Spree In Davis

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"The Last Flight," adapted to the screen from John Monk Saunders' magazine story, "Nikki (something-or-other)," is the feature of the reopening program in the Davis.

It is the whimsical story of four war aces, who try to drink the world dry for Volstead, after fighting to make the world safe for democracy.

Trained to face death and disillusioned by the war, they find themselves face to face with life. So, oppressed with an overwhelming sense of futility, they go alcoholic and get into the best bars in Paris and Lisbon.

PRETTIEST HAIR RIBBON

Then they meet Nikki, a native girl, who has never grown up. She's not so good-looking, but when she was a little girl, her mother said she had the prettiest hair ribbon. So that makes up for a lot of things.

To the characters in this story, comradeship is the greatest thing on earth and alcohol is the kindest friend. And if the picture is viewed through the eyes of these characters—eyes disillusioned by war and illusioned by drink—it becomes impressive drama. And this is how it should be viewed. If you mistake it for farce, you are a long way from home!

MUCH ODD HUMOR

Richard Barthelmess is billed as the star. But Helen Chandler, as Nikki, carries off the acting honors. And, to our way of thinking, young David Manners comes next. There is a sincerity to this boy's work that Mr. Barthelmess has never regained since his silent "Tol'able David." John Mack Brown, Elliott Nugent and Walter Byron also are prominent.

The film is crowded with much odd humor, which contrasts sharply with swift slices of tragedy. And, in the usual movie sense, it is not a war picture. The "last flight" comes in the opening sequence of the film and, from then on, it is a grand drinking bout, with pensive and foreboding drama lurking in the shadows.

It is, in fewer words, a picture that is different.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Fred St... we're informed by the Shubert office, is to appear in a new musical play in October, and promises a lot of stunts that he says were beyond him when he appeared in "Ripples" last season, when he says he was handicapped by stiffness resulting from his airplane accident. His daughter, Dorothy, who appeared with him in "Ripples," is playing in London. Fred, who has spent the summer fishin,' opines he'll have him another air hoss—as soon as they make 'em foolproof.

Small Timer says the Scotchman doesn't know how it is that he is thrifty, but is satisfied as long as its a gift.

* * *

"Cherries Are Ripe," the Anita Loos comedy that took Rod La Rocque and Vilma through the backlands—but not New York—last season, will open in Washington September 21, with Basil Sydney and Mary Ellis in the featured roles. They expect to reach Broadway in it early in October.

* * *

Small Timer says that, on the other hand, people who throw parties shouldn't live in glass houses.

Clark & McCullough, last season in London and last here in "Strike Up the Band," are rehearsing in "Here Goes the Bride," the producer of which is Peter Arno. It will open in Detroit October 3, according to present plans.

* * *

Small Timer says there is one good thing that people get more of than they did before the depression, and that is sleep.

West Homestead Man Slashed in Quarrel

Michael Morchuhki, 45, of 460 Eighth avenue, West Homestead, was in Homestead Hospital today with his throat slashed.

Morchuhki told police that he had been attacked last night by Lawrence Malkowich, 45, a fellow lodger, with a butcher knife. Friends of the two men told police who arrested Malkowich that they had quarreled several days ago.

Walter Winchell will be found on Page 12.

Burlesque Season Now In Academy

"Satan's Daughter" is the current Columbia burlesque production in the Academy. Billie Diamond, prima donna, heads the cast. Nazarro Hallo, blonde ingenue and novelty dancer, is another feature. Topping the men are Billy Hagan, eccentric comic, and Bob Eugene. There is a dancing chorus.

U. S. CHILDREN FEWER, CENSUS SHOWS

Substantial Increases in Population Revealed for Ages From 35 Upwards

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8—Indicating an actual decrease in the number of children less than five years old, the Bureau of Census today announced the grouping of the population of the United States by ages.

In 1930, when the total population was [illegible],046, there were 2,190,791 children of less than one year and 11,444,240 younger than five years. In the first group this was a decrease of 69,404 and for the second group of 125,840 since the census of 1925.

There was a slight increase in the number of children from 5 to 9 years between the 1920 and 1930 censuses, although last year that group made up a smaller percentage of the entire population, the fall having been from 10.8 per cent in 1920 to 10.3 per cent in 1930. In the 5-9 class were 12,607,609 children.

MORE OLDER PERSONS

There were substantial increases in the population in the ages from 35 years upward. Persons over 21 years in 1930 numbered 72,943,[illegible], an increase of over 12,000,000 in 10 years, while this class made up 59.4 per cent of the population, as compared with 57.6 per cent in 1920.

The census figures showed there were 1,503,[illegible] persons in the United States of 75 years or over, an increase of 443,492, due partially probably to the fact that more accurate data was obtained in 1930, and likewise to the gradual increasing span of life.

FEWER CITY CHILDREN

The largest age group was that between 35 and 44 years, which made up 14 per cent of the population, or 17,198,840, an increase of about 3,000,000 since 1920. Other age groups included:

Ten to 14 years, 12,004,877, an increase of 1,363,740.

Fifteen to 19, 11,552,115, an increase of 2,212,559.

Twenty to 24, 10,870,378, an increase of 1,553,357.

Twenty-five to 29, 9,833,608, an increase of 747,[illegible].

Thirty to 34, 9,120,421, an increase of 1,044,[illegible].

Forty-five to 54, 13,018,083, an increase of 2,[illegible],690.

Fifty-five to 64, 8,396,898, an increase of 1,865,226.

Sixty-five to 74, 4,720,609, an increase of 1,257,098.

The bureau said:

"In general, the percentage of children is highest in the rural-farm population and lowest in the urban population, with the rural-nonfarm population occupying an intermediate position. The number of children under 5 formed in 1930 11.1 per cent of the rural farm population, 10.5 per cent of the rural nonfarm population or that in villages and 8.2 per cent of the urban population."

The ages from 25 to 44 were characterized as probably the most productive years of life. In this period were found, in 1930, 32.8 per cent of the urban population, 27.8 per cent of the rural non-farm population and only 22.9 per cent of the rural farm population. This relation between the farm and urban areas was the result of migration from the farms to the cities, the bureau said.

Persons 65 and over formed 5.1 per cent of the urban and rural farm population and 6.6 per cent of the rural non-farm population, the latter figure having resulted in part because retired farmers and others frequently go to villages to spend the last years of life.

FAGAN AT UNION RALLY URGES 5-DAY WEEK

Many Community Events, Picnics and Sports Held In Pittsburgh District

Rallies, picnics and sports programs marked the celebration of Labor Day throughout the Pittsburgh district, while thousands of motorists took advantage of the three-day week-end holiday.

A Labor Day rally was held at West View Park under the auspices of the Central Labor Union. The principal speaker was Patrick T. Fagan, president of District No. 5 United Mine Workers of America, who advocated a six-hour working day and five-day working week as a means of reviving prosperity. WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Sept. 8.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

When will they quit taxing farmers' land regardless if it made anything? Or selling people's homes for taxes? Not till they get a sales tax, small on necessities and large on luxuries, then a stiff inheritance tax on the fellow that saves and don't spend. That will get him either way. No tax paid on the day you buy is as tough as asking you for it the next year when you are broke. It ought to work on automobiles, cigarets, lip rouge and soft drinks.

Labor 'Volunteers' Aid Germany's Building Plans

BERLIN.—(Universal.)—Germany may solve her unemployment problem by organizing a volunteer labor army.

Instead of wages, the volunteer laborers will be paid with food and clothing cards and receive free shelter.

The movement has already met with success in Eastern Germany where the government of Upper Silesia recently issued an appeal for volunteers to build a dam.

The movement may be welcomed by many cities and towns which, in view of their precarious financial state are unable to carry out necessary building programs.

FRUIT THEFTS DENIED BY PICNICKERS

Policeman Released Under $5,000 Bail at Hearing; Boy Victims Recovering

Three shots were fired point blank into a truck containing about 40 girls and boys returning from a Lithuanian picnic in Cherrydale Farm near Mt. Nebo road, Ohio Township, late Sunday, according to the accounts of children who were in the truck.

Two boys who were wounded are reported improved at Suburban General Hospital. They are Tony Stapinskey, 13, of 1439 Juniata street, with a bullet wound in the back, and Leo Petroulius, 14, of 822 Beaver avenue shot in the left arm.

FREED ON BAIL

John D. McPherson, city traffic officer, has been released under $5,000 bail on a charge of felonious shooting preferred by Chief of County Detectives George W. Murren before Alderman George J. Anderson.

The shooting occurred after dark on the private road leading to Cherrydale Farm, according to children who witnessed it. The truck had started for the North Side. Several hundred yards from the farm house the road winds up a steep grade through dense woods.

THREE SHOTS FIRED

As the truck started up the grade, a man stepped out of the woods at the side of the road and fired three shots. The Stapinskey boy screamed and fell to the floor of the truck.

Edward Verdekel, 13, of 1429 Reedsdale street, sitting beside him, said he and the other children were frightened and did not know what had happened. He related:

"We kids was scared. Tony was all over blood and some of it got on me. We yelled to the driver, but he didn't know what happened and went on up the hill. The man that shot looked like a man that was back at the picnic."

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

The driver took the frightened children to the main road. There the two wounded boys were transferred to another car and rushed to the hospital.

Children said that before they left the farm house a drunken man with a gun had threatened them. This man, who they were unable to identify by name, drew a gun, they said, and told them they had better watch out."

Children denied they had been stealing fruit. Albina Adominis, 14, of 118 Beaver avenue, said:

"We asked a woman at the farm if we could take some fruit, and she told us to go in the orchard and eat all we wanted, but not to take any with us. We listened to her."

McPherson told county detectives he fired three shots to frighten the boys, whom he accused of stealing fruit. He said he did not aim at the children. Traffic Inspector Jacob Dorsey has suspended McPherson pending a hearing before the Police Trial Board tomorrow.

INVALID DENIED WHEEL CHAIR

A helpless, bed-ridden woman who passed her eighty-fifth birthday yesterday, was denied the only gift she desired for years—a wheel chair.

An appeal made by Capt. Nell, of the New Kensington corps of the Salvation Army, failed to gratify the aged woman's only wish, but still Mrs. Bailey hopes that some day soon she will be able to leave her bed.

She lives with her son, George, but he is unemployed and cannot give his mother the gift.

WELLER GIVES NOON TALK

The District Attorney is a prosecutor rather than a police officer, John S. Weller, chairman of District Attorney Park's campaign committee, declared today in a noonday speech at Park headquarters.

Weller said:

"The District Attorney is not a snooping, peep-hole investigator. In the efficient and economical administration of his office it would be impractical and unwarranted to answer every hue and cry raised in his ear.

"Let us not forget that the District Attorney is a quasi-judicial officer and stands indifferent between the accused and any private interest. His office can legally function only against indictable public offenses."

ROAD OPENING DRAWS THRONG OF 5,000

New Linking of Waynesburg And Wheeling Celebrated; Fort Site Marker Unveiled

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Sept. 8.—A crowd of more than 5,000 attended the ceremonies at Jacktown Fair Grounds, Wind Ridge, yesterday, that marked the opening of the recently completed Cameron-Waynesburg highway, officially designated as Route 21.

This highway, in addition to joining Wheeling and Waynesburg by a direct all-weather route, connects two important river valleys, the Allegheny and Monongahela, Pennsylvania's part of the road extends from the state line to Waynesburg, a distance of 25 miles, while the West Virginia section connects with U. S. highway 250, two miles from the border.

TABLET DEDICATED

In connection with the road celebration a tablet was dedicated, marking the site of the historic Fort Ryerson, at Ryerson Station. The fort was built in the pioneer days as a defense against the Indians and was burned to the ground in an Indian attack. The marker is sponsored by the Children of the American Revolution of Waynesburg. It was erected by J. B. Suplee and D. W. Fox, who own the land upon which the fort stood. The monument is fashioned from a grist mill wheel, that was said to be more than 100 years old. The mill long vanished, occupied a place near the fort.

The road closely follows the route that centuries ago Indian tribes followed in their journeys connects Rodgersville, Graysville, Wind Ridge, Cameron, Rock Lick and Mounsville.

LEGION DIRECTS RITES

The dedicating ceremonies were under the direction of the Waynesburg and Cameron posts of the American Legion. A parade started from Carmichaels and ordered the Indian route to Wind Ridge, while a similar caravan started from West Virginia.

Among the officials from the two states who addressed the crowd were ex-Gov. Howard M. Gore, of West Virginia; Albert Sonnett, secretary to Gov. Conley, of West Virginia; Congressman Harry Temple of Washington County, Pa., who aided in the dedication of the marker at the site of Fort Ryerson, and State Senator C. W. Parkinson, of Greene and Washington counties. Maj. J. Ernest Isherwood, of Waynesburg and John C. Hopkins, of West Virginia, were co-chairman of the exercises.

WELFARE FUND DEFICIT HELD TO $100,000

Emergency Demands Cut Association Surplus; Programs Are Curtailed

In the face of extraordinary demands, the Welfare Fund will hold its deficit this year to $100,000, according to James C. Chaplin, finance committee chairman.

The fund, through 39 agencies, expended $1,575,000 for relief and welfare work.

The anticipated deficit Chaplin explained was due to emergency demands upon five organizations participating. The total deficit was $196,943, but a balance in the contingent fund and expected savings by other agencies will keep the deficit to $97,655.59, according to present estimates.

The individual deficits follow: Family Welfare Association, $145,561.99; Red Cross, $21,659.79; Milk and Ice Association, $10,020; Public Health Nursing Association, $7,613; McKeesport Family Welfare Association, $12,090.74.

In discussing the operation of the Welfare Fund, A. K. Oliver, president, said:

"The co-operation of the member agencies in effecting in every direction has been remarkable.

"Wherever possible, programs have been curtailed, purchases postponed and expenses reduced to make more money available for work with distressed families."

TEXAS REMOVES OIL FIELD ARMY

KILGORE, Tex., Sept. 8.—(AP)—The East Texas oil field's "army of occupation" was reduced materially today.

Nearly 600 men and officers of the Texas National Guard, called out by Gov. Ross S. Sterling August 17 to enforce a shutdown decree, were demobilized to return home this morning.

Brig. Gen. Jacob F. Wolters, commandant, kept 120 men and 32 officers to help enforce the State Railroad Commission proration order setting each well's daily allowable production at 225 barrels.

The East Texas field, which produced a flow of petroleum that all but smashed the national market prior to the advent of martial law, was reopened last Saturday. Crude oil prices had advanced materially.

Wells of Oklahoma and Kansas, closed by state officials in an effort to increase prices to $1 a barrel, remained shut down.

SOVIET STEEL MILLS SLUMP

MOSCOW, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Drawing a bleak picture of certain sections of the steel and iron industry, the presidium of the Supreme Economic Council moved today to reorganize administration, transportation and labor conditions in factories, as remedies.

Immediate reorganization of factory administration to a single control and budget basis and institution of the piece work wage system were among provisions of a decree issued by the presidium.

Improvement of workers' living conditions and transfer of technicians and skilled workers from administrative positions to actual production were other provisions.

The presidium declared conditions as shown by reports of steel trusts were extremely unsatisfactory in fulfilling production plans, owing to lack of technical and economic control in various sections, increasing machinery breakage and mismanagement and a shortage of skilled workers.

CHANTAL FAVORS THE GORED SKIRT FOR DAYTIME WEAR

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 8.—Chantal is doing a lot of new things with her fall clothes that are very interesting. She favors gored skirts for daytime wear that ripple towards the bottom. Many of Chantal's suits, frocks and even long coats reveal the tiny peplum. She is showing a new length of jacket — long finger-tip — that is tailored, fitted to a slender waist and flaring below the hips. Used as separate wraps in bright colored wools, they are most effective.

* * *

SKETCHED TODAY is one of Chantal's favorite evening gowns. Of palest pink satin, she uses twists of the satin to encircle the waistline and the skirt at a point midway between hip and knee. Below the latter twist the skirt flares with a circular movement. A similar twist in light apple green georgette edges the decolletage, dipping in back in a rounded point. The shoulder straps are of green and at the back of the waistline a decorate touch is added with three flowers in pink, green and strawberry.

* * *

BRUYERE PRESENTS a very interesting afternoon frock in this black crepe assouna model which is combined with touches of lemon yellow georgette at neckline and wrist. The puffed sleeve suggests the leg-o'-mutton in a modified version. Insets of bias material add variety in the details of the corsage and top of the skirt. The soft, flaring line of the skirt is especially good in this material, which has a gracious manner of hanging in deep, luxurious folds.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of cameo pink patine velvet with a matching turban having a blue ostrich plume. She carried pink roses, blue delphinium and baby's breath.

Miss Elizabeth Nancy Stone, of Oconomowoc, Wis., classmate of the bride at the University of Wisconsin, was maid of honor wearing a gown of powder blue crepe with a matching hat and carrying an arm bouquet of sweetheart roses and delphinium. George H. McChesney, of Pittsburgh, was best man. The bride's mother wore gray chiffon over rose satin, and the bridegroom's mother chose black satin.

The wedding dinner was served immediately after the ceremony with the bridal table having covers laid for 16, and later the reception and dance were given.

My dear—you have no idea how shocked I was . . . !"

"YOU know I spent the week-end with Helen. Someone really ought to speak to her. She's such a nice girl, and she's perfectly fastidious about everything else. But she wears her underthings a second day—and everybody perspires a little. Why does she run the risk of offending?"

Personal daintiness! The subject of whispered comment, veiled hints. Lose it and you lose all chance of social acceptance.

Fresh lingerie each day is absolutely essential to daintiness. All day long underthings absorb perspiration. A daily change is even more important than a daily bath. And it's so easy to wear fresh lingerie every day. For Lux removes every trace of perspiration, yet protects colors and fabrics. And it takes four minutes or less. Make a habit of washing out your underthings and stockings in Lux diamonds, after each wearing.

Underthings absorb perspiration. Avoid offending . . .

Protect daintiness this 4-minute way

1 Wash after each wearing, for perspiration acids left in silk fade colors and rot threads. With Lux it takes only a few minutes—less than it takes to wash your face and hands.

2 Never rub dainty lingerie with cake soap. Rubbing tends to streak colors and weaken fabrics. Tests show Lux removes perspiration acids completely—yet leaves colors sparkling, like new. Anything safe in water is safe in Lux.

3 Wash this 4-minute way:
1 tablespoon of Lux diamonds does 1 day's undies.
Dip up and down, rinse twice, squeeze in bath towel, shake out. Then they're fresh and sweet!

Try Lux FREE. Try this wonderful care for your lingerie, at our expense. Just send us your name and address, and by return mail you will receive a full-sized package of Lux free. Write Lever Brothers Co., Dept. XF-1, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

LUX for underthings keeps them like new in spite of constant washing

It stimulates your taste sense, makes each smoke taste like the first one of the day—each smoke a fresh experience. Remember there is no gum so good as BEECH-NUT.

Convention Dinner to Be Held Tonight by W.C.T.U.

At tonight's banquet in McCreery's, which will be the chief feature of the fifty-seventh annual convention of the Allegheny County Women's Christian Temperance Union, Mrs. Mary Harris Armour, known as the "Georgia Cyclone," will be the principal speaker. Mrs. Helen Barton, a member of the Scotland W. C. T. U., District Attorney Andrew T. Park and George B. Krause, district enforcement officer, will also speak.

Improvement in prohibition enforcement cannot be judged by Pennsylvania, New York or New Jersey, Mrs. Elizabeth J. Gibson, president of the county branch, said in her address this morning. She said in 10 years 22 states have strengthened their original enforcement acts, 19 have held to the original and only five have repealed. If sentiment for prohibition is to be kept up, it will have to be done by the women, Mrs. Gibson declared.

Mrs. Gibson called the convention to order at 10 o'clock this morning. There was prayer, Psalm reading, a hymn and the flag salute before the adoption of the program, then the treasurer's report by Mrs. Dora L. Ritchey, the reports of the Young People's Branch by Mrs. Eleanor Burke, of the Loyal Temperan Union by Mrs. Thomas E. Carson; of the Temperance Light Bearers by Miss Elizabeth Kennedy, reports of directors and other business.

Mrs. R. B. Robinson led the quiet hour and noontide prayer. Election of officers takes place this afternoon, together with further business, including other reports.

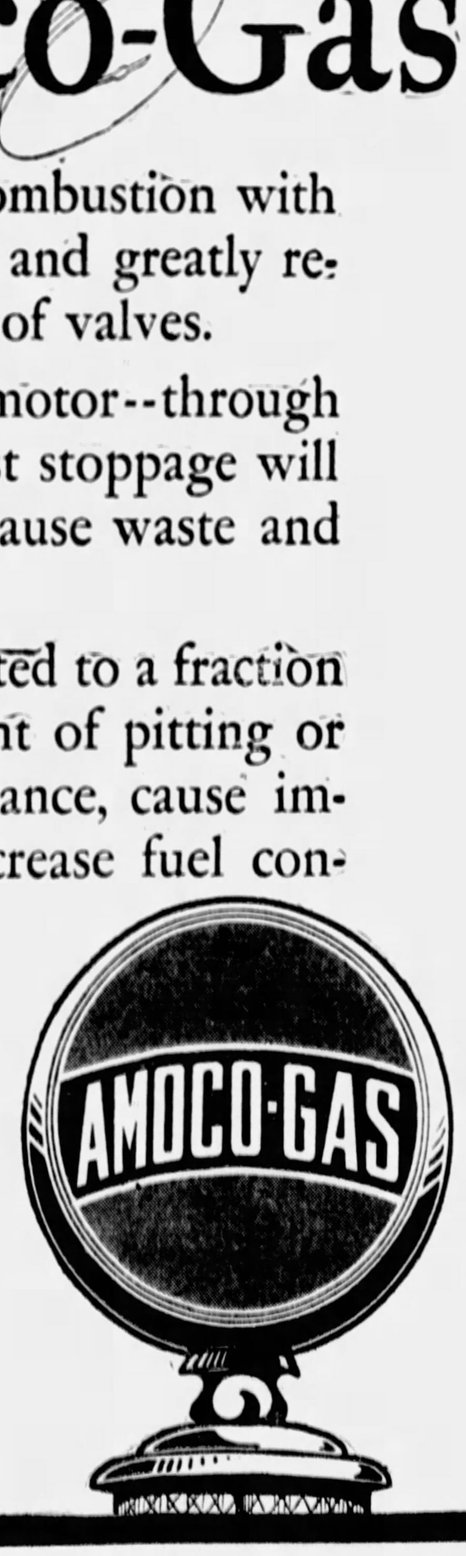
Save your VALVES with Amoco-Gas



AMOCO-GAS gives complete combustion with an absence of hard carbon and greatly reduces the pitting and clogging of valves.

Valves are the lungs of your motor--through them it "breathes." The slightest stoppage will choke and stifle your motor--cause waste and reduce efficiency.

Your valves are carefully adjusted to a fraction of an inch--the slightest amount of pitting or carbon will reduce valve clearance, cause improper intake and exhaust, increase fuel consumption and reduce power.

Save your valves with Amoco-Gas--and save yourself some real money at the same time.

Meeting Rich Men Is One Thing, Marrying Them Is Another—Fay King

By FAY KING

Any girl with a pretty face may well have faith in the future but she must be blessed with a good bit of common sense and discrimination.

Meeting men with money is one thing. Marrying them is another.

So eager are some pretty girls to be sponsored into the enchanted circle where they will meet "millionaires" that they put altogether too much trust in men and women of no character who seem to be the ones who can guide them to these matrimonial catches.

And too often they find to their sorrow that they are only the victims of those who make it their business to lead young and pretty girls to rich debauches and it leads to nothing but ruin and misery.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Showers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper for a mother or sister to have a bridal shower? If not, who should give it?

2. Is the groom-to-be supposed to be present?

3. Is it proper for a girl to receive a hope chest from her sweetheart?

M. D.

1. There are no rules about this, and for every shower plan and occasion we must make up our minds as to what things we think are in good taste and what things we think are not. Just as we do for any other party.

'Tis true that showers have a bit of shadow on their party reputations, for so often they are scarcely more than nagging parties. Now naturally if they are planned by each close members of the family, as a mother or a sister of the bride, they will inevitably look a bit too forced. Don't you think so? When a friend of the bride-to-be invites some other very close friends of the bride-to-be to come to her home and to bring some little gift for the new home, some appropriate shower gift, then it seems all right.

2. Usually men are not guests at showers. But often the hostess asks some men to join the ladies after the party, the groom, the husbands of the girls present, or the fiance, or that friends.

3. Yes, this is a charming gift for the fiance to give his fiancee and one full of sentiment.

To An Old Friend

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I just recently I have learned that a girl who some years ago belonged to the same Sunday School class I did has married and now has a darling baby boy. We have not seen each other for several years but I would like to offer congratulations. I do not believe she would recognize me by my married name. Will you please tell me how I should sign the card? Would it be more proper to just write a note than a card?

2. I have not had the pleasure of meeting her husband. Should the card or note be addressed to them both, nevertheless?

READER

1. Do write a note to this friend, rather than send her a card. And then you can tell her in the body of the note of your marriage and your new formal name.

2. A note of this kind would be addressed only to your friend, but of course in the note you would send your friendly greetings and congratulations to her husband.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Health is the grand old beauty wizard. Without health good looks are builded on an infirm and shifting foundation. Loss of appetite, loss of sleep, nerve tension, create exterior blemishes such as shadows under the eyes, premature wrinkles, graying hair and the figure that lacks shape and grace. Cosmetics are almost a waste of time and money when one is not strictly up to health standard.

Madame of the dull complexion, one that lacks delicacy of texture and tint, will find improvement by changing her diet to one that does not include rich gravies, heavy meats or pastries. She needs more mineral salts, which are found in green vegetables, and she needs fruit juices in considerable quantities. Fried foods are not her beauty dish. She can indulge to her heart's content in broiled chops and steaks.

If a girl hasn't the zest and the zippo for outdoor recreation she is only half alive. All exercises in the open air help to preserve the sweet qualities of youth, the erect anatomy, the firm contour of the face, healthy expansion of the lungs, brightness of eyes, buoyancy of spirit. Now is the time to flirt with Al Fresco, to golf, swim, play tennis, tram through the woods.

Madge Decides to Name the Baby "Faith"

As my father asked me if I knew now what he wished to name my baby daughter I could scarcely see his face for the mist of tears which I had been trying to force back during his humiliating recital of the happiness killed by his own hand which had been his with my mother in the days before I came to the world.

Faith—my mother's middle name which I never had known he possessed and which I now learned from my father's sad-sweet lips was his special name for her because of the divine faith she always gave to him.

This was the name he wanted our little princess to have. And it was the name she should have. I told myself with a rush of fierce protective love for him no matter what anyone—and he said:

"Yes, Father." I said when I could speak. "I know it's a beautiful name and I know how you—I—let's name her Faith."

I thought I can remember all of the bitterness of my father's tone when he answered. "Thank you, my child." And then, suddenly, with my father's head bowed on his hands, I knew that I was crying for him and for my mother and for myself.

I don't know how long we sat there. I only know that when I looked up at last I knew that I would never have suggested this other name only that your mother-in-law's opposition seemed to be creating a deadlock in the matter. But I should not wish to antagonize Richard about it.

"You won't," Lillian said bluntly. "Just leave him to me. All I'll have to do will be to give him a skeleton outline of what you have just told us, and the softest heart under a hard-shell exterior in all this section will be clamoring for the name you want. It isn't the Dicky-bird I'm worrying over. It's his mother."

I think you wrong her, Lillian," my father said a bit diactically. "Oh! I know her faults and I often have silently resented them, but I cannot tell what I have considered her valuable treatment of Margaret. But I think she is a big woman underneath her capriciousness and that a name like mine cannot help but appeal to her.

"I will give her a way out and a chance to be a martyr," Lillian commented cynically, then caught herself up remorsefully. "Oh, I ought not to talk like that about the poor old girl. She's pure gold when you can get the alloy separated, but it takes quite a lot of separation."

My father's face grave with disapproval of her levity, broke into an involuntary smile.

"Lillian, you are incorrigible," he said as he rose from his chair. "But I'm glad you both approve my way out."

"Oh, we do," I said, but Lillian asked calmly:

"Where are you going, Chief? Not to put the plan in operation right away, I hope."

"You must be a clairvoyant," he said. "That was just what I meant to do. Why not?"

"Don't!" Lillian said bluntly. "until Dicky gets home. Let Madge or me see him before you talk to his mother. We can see that he keeps quiet about it, but that is something we can't promise with Madame Graham. If he chanced to fall for your proposition she'd greet Dicky tonight with the announcement that the baby was named Faith, and there'd be such gloating in her tones over the defeat of the name Margaret that the Dicky-bird would stage a wing-flapping on his own account. Above all things, you want to keep him sweet upon this name proposition."

Household Hints

If the buttons on sonny's suit seem loose, it is well to remove them before laundering. They are apt to become lost in the wash and if they should just dangle they will be in the way during wringing and ironing. Sew them on after ironing.

If you have several pairs of white fabric gloves put away because they are not in style at present, take them out and tint them with coffee, tea or powder made for the purpose and turn them into a more fashionable sand color. Then you can wear them out and enjoy them.

Thumb-sucking should be stopped as soon as possible with the baby. It frequently causes teeth to come in crooked, interferes with the digestion and carries germs into baby's mouth. It may take time to stop it but it is worth the effort.

My little son will never eat carrots, peas or celery with any degree of relish. I served to him as a plain vegetable, but if stirred into a little soup stock all the vegetables disappear as if by magic. Most children seem to like soup and all it contains.

High Blood Pressure Need Not Cause Worry

A newspaper columnist told us about two doctors. The first physician found his blood pressure to be 100 and told him it was too low. Immediately he went to another, who found the pressure to be 145 and said it was too high.

Dr. Copeland

Such experiences might greatly lessen your faith in doctors. But they shouldn't.

The blood pressure is a variable affair and easily influenced by external factors. A patient visiting the doctor may be excited and fearful of what may be wrong. As a result the blood pressure may be raised as much as 40 points.

Perhaps what the first doctor told the newspaper man was disturbing. It may well be that his fear and haste in reaching the second physician raised his pressure.

Many physicians insist upon taking the blood pressure several times before determining its significance. You can see why.

High blood pressure is not a disease. It is hardly more than one symptom or sign of a disturbance somewhere in the mechanism of the body. Unfortunately, many individuals consider it as a disease and seek relief for it as such.

Some cases of high blood pressure may be due to changes in the heart, the thyroid gland or in the kidney. Others are caused by hardening of the arteries. Constant headache and disturbances in the vision are likely to accompany the latter.

One of the most common forms of high blood pressure is called by the doctors "essential hypertension." This type is rarely associated with any definite changes to the heart or kidney. As a rule the blood vessels are soft, with no signs of hardening. The eyes are normal and physical examination reveals nothing of importance.

It is of this type of high blood pressure I wish to speak today. In spite of the popular fear of high pressure, there is no reason for alarm. There is no occasion to associate all sorts of accidents and tragedies with a really meaningless symptom.

This type of high blood pressure is usually discovered accidentally, often during a life insurance examination. Except for the accident of discovery the normal span of life would have passed with no suggestion of anything unusual.

One of the most common causes of high blood pressure is our manner of living. Americans differ from Europeans in that they do not relax. We are too strenuous.

If the pressure is too high it is well to learn to rest. Leisurely living will prolong life.

BIG YEAR LOOMS FOR SKIBO CAPTAIN

WITH A WOEFUL scarcity of backs in Carnegie Tech's football training camp, it begins to appear that the Tartan offense this year will rest on the shoulders of Capt. Murray Armentrout, who will be playing his third season, and George Kavel, who was one of the best sophomore halfbacks in this district last fall. With Armentrout appearing regularly in the backfield, numerous fans who have always wondered why he wasn't at halfback in every game will be satisfied. That the big former Schenley High School player is determined not to disappoint his followers is made apparent by the manner in which he has jumped into the practice drills.

Murray Armentrout

Armentrout has had a peculiar football career. He was a center at Schenley High, moved over to end when he attended Mercersburg, and continued as a terminal when he entered Carnegie. Steffen and Waddell seized upon him as a potential back when he came up to the varsity squad, but until this season a combination of circumstances prevented his steady appearance at halfback.

WHEN ARMENTROUT WAS a sophomore John Kareis was troubled with boils and Murray had to fill in at fullback. Howard Eyth was suffering from the effects of an injured shoulder broken the year before, and Army had to help out in his position, too. Last year, Eyth struck a sensational stride and Kareis, too, returned to form, pushing Armentrout back to the reserve list. Murray also underwent an operation for appendicitis, which further retarded his progress.

During all the time he was being shifted around, Army was learning the intricacies of backfield play, rubbing off the rough edges, and acquiring the knack of conserving his energy, the wasting of which had been his greatest early fault. He used to give so freely of himself in the early stages of the game that he would tire badly later on.

IT IS NO secret that opposing teams have feared Armentrout more than any other Carnegie back. His wild, unorthodox rushes have not been easy to stop. This year he ought to be even better, as in camp he has been picking up all the points he needed to make him a great back.

Murray's improved work shows that he has been studying his game. He can sidestep and swerve with the best of them, stop and start, twist and turn. With his 188 pounds, this newly-developed ability is going to make him doubly dangerous and perhaps the answer to Steffen's prayer for just one bit of dynamite in the backfield.

AN UNUSUAL NUMBER of baseball high lights featured Labor Day. The Pirates stretched their winning streak to six straight, their longest drive of the year. The Cubs suffered their ninth consecutive defeat. Pie Traynor drove in his one thousandth run in his one thousand four hundred and fifty-first major game. Paul Derringer pitched his third successive shutout and ran his string of scoreless innings up to 29. The Cardinals won their third shutout in a row before being scored on in the second game of the holiday bill. The major league record of eight bases on balls in one inning, set by Bill Gray, Washington pitcher, on August 28, 1909, against the White Sox, was equaled by Mahaffey, McDonald, Peterson and Rommel, of the A's, against the Yankees.

Tommy Thevenow

THOUGH THE FATES had already handed him so many bumps as to cause him to become known as the most unfortunate player in the major leagues, they were not yet ready to let up on Tommy Thevenow. Now he's out for the season with a double fracture in his left foot.

An injury jinx has pursued Thevenow for several years and forced him to spend months in hospitals. First he was severely injured in an automobile crash. Then he went down with a broken leg. On two other occasions he had to undergo operations. Last Sunday was his birthday, his twenty-eighth anniversary, and it's a queer sort of present he gets in being sent back to the hospital, just when he had swung into a brilliant shortstopping stride second to none in the National League.

SUCH AN INJURY might easily put an end to the major league days of many a player who had gone through all that Thevenow has experienced. It might slow up the average shortstop just enough to force him into the minors.

But Thevenow is no average player in the matter of heart and determination. He has gamely fought his way back several times in the face of ill luck and injury that would have stopped an athlete with less grit, and possibly he may do it again. He'll get plenty of moral help, for every Pittsburgh fan is pulling for him.

BASEBALL FANS WERE on the wrong tack in figuring that the early closing of the major league season this year would mean an earlier world series. Though the pennant races will end on September 27, the big series will not be opened until Thursday, October 1. That means a wait through three open dates, when the teams could have started play after a single off day, or two at the outside. Then, after the first two games in St. Louis on Thursday and Friday, October 1 and 2, there will be another gap of two days before the series is resumed in Philadelphia on Monday, October 5.

THIS BECAUSE THE teams will be traveling on Saturday, October 3, and October 4 must be left open because Sunday ball cannot be played in Pennsylvania. If the series were to be opened on Wednesday, September 30, the clubs could play the third game of the string in Philadelphia on Saturday, October 3, avoiding two successive open dates and saving two days in playing time.

The later the dates of the diamond derby the more it cuts in on football, and the greater is the risk of encountering unfavorable weather. Some of the world series figures evidently want to hold the sports page and the spotlight as long as possible.

THE HARMSWORTH TROPHY and the international motor boat racing championship will remain in the United States for another year, at least, but Americans would have preferred to see it retained by a real victory, rather than by the disqualification which was followed by the unfortunate sinking of the English challenging craft.

Kaye Don

It is hard to find any sportsmanship in Gar Wood's reported "strategy" of luring Kaye Don and Miss England II into beating the gun by sending his own Miss America IX across the line first ahead of time, the only time in his career he ever violated that rule. He knew it would mean the disqualification of his only opponent, and the saving of the cup, and he could afford to sacrifice Miss America IX for the same offense because he had another boat in the back ground to go through with the race in the event Don failed to fall into the trap.

THE SINKING OF Miss England II adds another chapter to the story of misfortune that has befallen every challenger since Wood won the trophy in 1920. In 1921 Maple Leaf VII was damaged in unloading, and sank when her bottom gave way in the first few minutes of the race. In 1925 the contest had to be called off because the French challenger, Excelsior France, burned during a trial before she ever crossed the ocean. In 1926 Excelsior France made the crossing, but floundered in the race and failed to finish. In 1928 Estelle III was swamped in a swell and turned over. In 1929 Estelle IV hit driftwood and was put out of the running. In 1930 Estelle V broke an oil line in the first heat and Estelle IV was forced out by mechanical trouble in the second. The disqualification yesterday would have ended this year's race even if the challenger had not sunk.

GAR, ANGERED, TRICKS KAYE INTO DEFEAT

By HAROLD KAHL
International News Service.

DETROIT, Sept. 8.—Strategy born of the refusal of the British challenger, Kaye Don, to permit a 45-minute delay in the international motorboat races on the historic Detroit River here today had given Gar Wood the coveted Harmsworth trophy. The second and last heat of the classic occurred yesterday when the 200,000 people who lined both banks of the river were provided with never-to-be-forgotten thrills.

Wood's Miss America IX is still Harmsworth champion and Miss England II is being fished out of the river. Two false starts, which resulted in the disqualification of both Miss America IX and Miss England II, gave the second heat victory to Wood's second entry, Miss America VIII.

As a result of the double disqualification, the race became "no match" under the rules of the British international trophy deed of the plaque and Miss America IX retained the prize by virtue of winning it last year. Miss England II overturned and sank on the first lap after cutting a buoy too closely and was caught in the wash waves of Miss America IX.

WOOD EXPLAINS MOVE.

Wood said:

"Sure I'm happy. I asked for a postponement of 45 minutes because of a leaky gas tank in Miss America IX. There was a crack six inches long in the tank. My request was denied and it made me angry.

"When Eddie Edenburn, chairman of the race committee, told me Don would not agree to a 45-minute delay I told him that I could have the tank repaired in time. I was coming down the river and make a false start purposely. I told him when I did, Don likely would follow me.

"Don had intimated that I stood a good chance to beat him if I got across the line first. I knew he would be anxious to get the break on the start.

"If he did I knew it meant disqualification of both Miss America IX and Miss England II, but there was still Miss America VIII to finish the race. If Don wanted to play that way with me, all right. I figured I could outsmart him and you know what happened. He followed me across the starting line ahead of time and we keep the trophy."

HARD LUCK, DON SAYS.

Don, the English challenger, said:

"We were asked to postpone the start of the race. If I had agreed to the postponement, the 45-minute delay would have caused the oil in the engine to cool and I should have had to cruise along the first lap until it reached the right temperature before gaining my full speed.

"If Mr. Gar Wood had only one boat in the race I should have been willing to agree to the postponement, even for a day. But Miss America VIII was ready and I felt that it was not unfair to refuse Mr. Wood's request.

"As for Mr. Wood beating the gun and I following him, there is nothing to say but that it was my hard luck. Rules are rules.

"I also was too anxious in making the first turn. In an effort to overtake Gar Wood I didn't sweep around out of his wake. I got caught on a wave in his wash and over we went. Dick Gardner, one of my mechanics, bruised his shoulder. Roy Platford, the other helper, was knocked unconscious temporarily. As for myself I have just a wrenched knee. I hope to be back in the Harmsworth

Although dead, Young Bruno was declared victor because he had easily won every round up to that time. WORLD SERIES OPENS OCT. 1

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The World Series between the Champion Philadelphia Athletics and the National League winner, either St. Louis or New York, will begin October 1, executives of the National and American Leagues decided after a meeting with Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

Whether the opening scene will be St. Louis or New York remained to be determined, but Philadelphia was designated as the city in which the contending clubs will meet after the first two games on National League grounds.

Should the Cardinals cinch the pennant, the Missouri city will see the teams in action Thursday and Friday, October 1 and 2, and Saturday and Sunday will be open dates for travel to Philadelphia, where three games will be staged October 5, 6 and 7.

In the event more than five games are necessary, the battleground will again shift to St. Louis and play resumed October 9.

If the Giants steal a march and claim the championship, the first two games will be played in New York and the third in Philadelphia October 3. Sunday will be an off day and the contest resumed Monday and continued Tuesday.

All series games will be called at 1:30 p. m., the standard time of the city in which they are played, and in event of rain or suspension of play for other reasons, the rest of the schedule will be postponed one day and the called game played on the grounds originally scheduled.

Box seats will sell for $6.60; reserved seats for $5.50; general admission seats for $3 and bleacher seats for $1.

WITTMER GOES UNDER KNIFE

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 8 (AP).—Albert E. Wittmer, head football coach at Princeton University and State Assemblyman, underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis at Princeton Hospital early this afternoon. No report of his condition was issued.

Doctors said, however, under normal conditions Wittmer would be able to attend to his football work in about two weeks.

Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

BOSTON, Sept. 8.—I see they're calling Francis Ouimet's comeback the triumph of an old man, and he is only 38. They should get a load of a guy like Rabbit Maranville, who was playing shortstop for the Pilgrims when Myles Standish managed them from the bench.

Nick Altrock

The Rabbit did his winter training with George Washington at Valley Forge, was traded for two outfielders, three spies and seven prisoners in the Civil War, and he's still playing marvelous ball with the Boston Braves.

If Ouimet, at 38, is an old man, Maranville is a dinosaur egg on toast. And Uncle Nick is a museum piece.

NEW PITCHER LIKELY SLAB FOE FOR REDS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Labor Day has come and gone; the Pirates have been out of the pennant reckoning since Memorial Day, or longer; the Bucco nate has been confirmed second division athletes throughout the long summer; the race is almost run; the gridiron heroes are in their training camps and the primary election is just around the corner—yet here we have Pirate fans all excited about the doings of the team. Now isn't that a tribute to the national game?

Hal Finney

Winners in their last six combats, the Oakland Orchard warriors will try to add another triumph this afternoon as they stage their farewell meeting of the season with the beneficient Reds. The Howlermen acted up and fought like real diamond stars yesterday, but at the finish of the holiday they were a twice beaten foe, while the Pirates, through their double success, had drawn up to within four games of the Cubs, new occupants of the last money position. The Rajah and his Bears took a couple more on the chops yesterday.

HARRIS MAY HURL.

Manager Ens of the Pirates today considered the advisability of using his new pitcher, Right-hander Bill Harris—on the slab. The Fort Worth graduate has made a favorable impression on Ens and Jewel, also is swayed by the fact that Heinie Meine, whose turn it is to pitch, is suffering from a slight indisposition. Johnny Ogden will flip the rocket for Dan Howley.

Larry French and Ervin Brame turned in the two holiday successes. French had quite an easy time of it in the morning, he copping the battle 6 to 1. In the afternoon Brame pitched like a star, but he had to have a "break" to gain a verdict over the veteran, Eppa Rixey. The score of this fight was 4 to 2.

Regret and sorrow were written in the faces of the Pirates today, nevertheless. Their knowledge that Shortstop Tommy Thevenow was in a hospital with a double leg fracture was the cause of the Buccos' sadness. Little Tommy was

MITCHELL, ARKLE IN MORGANTOWN FINAL

MISS GRIMES WINS AMONG WOMEN

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN
Staff Correspondent

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Sept. 8. Dooley L. Mitchell, Georgetown University star and recent runner-up to the national public parks men's singles championship, meets B. F. Arkle, Wheeling flash and holder of the Northwestern Pennsylvania crown, in final play for main-to-main honors of the third annual Morgantown Country Club invitation net tournament here this afternoon. History repeats itself in the meeting of the duo for, just a year ago today, Mitchell downed the West Virginian for the local 1930 crown. Immediately following the Mitchell-Arkle affair, Arkle and his fellow-townsman, husky Bill Abrams, will strive to defend the doubles laurels they landed just a twelvemonth back. Sam Cohn and Aubrey Smith, crack Beckley, W. Va., pair, will supply the opposition.

Mitchell rallied impressively over Randolph Sheets, Wash. & Lee lad and Western Maryland premier, 6-4, 6-0, in the semi-finals yesterday. Sheets had earlier ousted the day-before pair, Frank Smith, Edgewood leader, 6-2, 9-7.

EXTRAORDINARY FEAT

Arkle attained the concluding round by virtue of an upset victory over his ancient rival, Cohn, the second seeded contestant, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4. Arkle, after winning nine of the first 10 points, lapsed badly to blow the initial set. In session two, however, with Cohn leading at 30-15 in game one, the Wheeling ace began a streak that landed him 16 straight points, a most extraordinary feat in fast competition.

The impetus this gained appeared to carry him through the remainder of the battle, though Cohn once held 2-0 advantage in set three and later staved off no less than five match points ere Arkle eased over a short one for placement to wind up the fray after quintet of deuces in game 10 of the decisive rank.

MISS GRIMES VICTOR

Frances Grimes, dusky Morgantown girl who recently spiked the dope by annexing the women's crown at Mountain Lake Park, continued her hard hitting from both baseline and forecourt to register a 6-1, 6-4 wind-up success over Mary McDonnell, Altoona contender. Miss Grimes downed Helen Carson, Glen Greensburg southpaw, 6-0, 6-3, in a morning tilt, while Miss McDonnell defeated Mary Bixler, a compatriot, 6-4, 6-0, in a perfect match-up.

CANTLON WINS ALTOONA RACE

By JESS CARVER
Sun-Telegraph Correspondent

ALTOONA, Pa., Sept. 8. The 1931 automobile racing season at Lipton Bowl local board speedway was bowed out here yesterday with Shorty Cantlon of Detroit veteran Italian racing driver, stealing the show. Shorty piloted his Bowes Seal-fast special in all three of the events on the closing program: two 25-mile sprints and the 100-mile feature, gaining the Checkered flag of victory twice and copping up in third place once. He won the big race of the day, which was all important.

Cantlon roared across the finish line first, the result's giving veteran Bill Cummings of Indianapolis suffered a big setback as he relinquished his last three miles with half a mile lead. Before Bill could get the shoe changed and spun back in the race, Shorty had sent his mount hurtling into the van where he remained until the pay-off. Cummings has looked at least winner from the end of the first 25 miles on until he threw the line and the race at Bill.

SHORTY WINS $2,012

Cummings eated second place O. K. and has his feelings salved somewhat with the $900 second money. Cantlon took $1,500 for first, which with the purses he captured in the sprints gave him $2,012.50 for the total. No bad at all.

MORE MILES PER GALLON

Gentlemen:

The purpose of the economy test recently completed by me was to determine if Blue Sunoco, which sells at regular gas price, actually delivered as many miles per gallon as the better nationally known premium-priced fuels which sell at 3 cents more per gallon.

I found that the consumption of Blue Sunoco was less than that of any of the other fuels tested - which means more miles per gallon on the road.

The results are briefly stated in the following table:

Brake Horse Power	GASOLINE used	A	B	C	D	BLUE SUNOCO	F	G	H
17	gals. per hour	2.217	2.246	2.220	2.280	2.115	2.195	2.268	2.302
25	gals. per hour	2.845	2.727	2.725	2.800	2.617	2.725	2.677	2.742

17 Brake Horse Power at 1900 r.p.m. approximates 35 miles per hour on a level road.
25 Brake Horse Power at 1900 r.p.m. approximates 35 miles per hour on an average hill.

This proved that for average road driving Blue Sunoco was from 2.3% to 8.7% more economical than any fuel tested.

Its economy is even more apparent since Blue Sunoco sells for 3 cents less per gallon than the other fuels.

Very truly yours,

72+ OCTANE RATING

Octane rating is the new method used by the U. S. Government and approved by the Society of Automotive Engineers to determine the knockless rating of gasolines. Blue Sunoco is 72+. Since automotive engineers agree that an octane rating of over 70 is necessary for satisfactory knockless performance in any high compression motor, Blue Sunoco's rating is more than adequate for any stock automobile.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Decline — Local Fuels Active

STOCKS TOPPLE AS TRADING RESUMES

Steel Breaks to Lowest Since 1921 as Numerous Other Shares Sag 2 to 4

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Financial markets were more wearied than rested by the three-day week-end, and sagged heavily as trading was resumed today.

Continued absence of tangible signs of a seasonal recovery in business, together with further gloomy reports regarding unemployment, heavy liquidation of large accumulations of securities in stocks which declined rather sharply in the early trading. The pressure was quickest in the session's first quarter, but recuperative buying was rather slight.

United States Steel common declined more than 2 points to a new low for the year, breaking through its bottom of last August. Kansas City Power & Light and other utilities also showed weakness. Issues specially affected included American Water Works & Electric and Foreign Power, Columbia Gas, North American, New York Central, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, New Haven, Baltimore and Ohio, Erie, Chesapeake & Ohio, Delaware & Hudson, Lackawanna, Lehigh Valley, Westinghouse Electric, Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville, Nash and Woolworth. General Motors sagged more than a point.

Corporate news included reduction of New Haven's annual dividend to $4 from $6, and General Motors August sales report showing sharp shrinkage from the July month, of last year, at least in part attributable to the fact that new models were brought out in the summer of 1930.

The slashing of New Haven's dividend was seen by Wall Street forecasters as heralding, in some measure, a bearish policy by railroad officials.

General Motors said wholesale domestic consumption of its products in August, compared with 61,421 in August of last year, and with 25,104 in July of this year, was favorable, however, that sales to domestic consumers were substantially larger than the sale of 62,667 cars to dealers, so that the dealer inventory situation should be favorable.

Early estimates indicate that tomorrow's midweek statistics on steel production and freight car loadings will again fail to disclose any signs of a seasonal upturn. Reports from the Youngstown area indicate a sharp curtailment of output partly as result of the holiday week-end.

The surveys issued by leading investment advisory services at the start of the week were again somewhat bearish, particularly regarding stocks. One of the leading services, however, spoke of more aggressive leadership in business and finance and said it was possible that developments of a highly constructive nature in the domestic financial situation may be announced within a fortnight.

LARGER COTTON CROPS SEEN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—A cotton crop of 15,685,000 bales of 500-pound gross weight is forecast by the Department of Agriculture on a condition as of September 1 of 68 per cent of normal. This compares with the department's August 1 forecast of 15,584,000 bales on a condition of 74.9 per cent and with a final production in 1930 of 13,932,000 bales.

The Bureau of the Census reports 565,160 running bales of lint cotton counting round bales as halves, ginned from the crop of 1931 prior to September 1, compared with 1,870,919 for 1930 and 1,568,424 for 1929.

Preliminary estimate of total abandonment for the season is placed at 1.5 per cent of the 40,389,000 acres for harvest. Upon that acreage the crop of 15,685,000 bales indicated by the September condition would approximate a yield of 183.6 pounds of lint cotton an acre.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Utilities led a reaction on the curb market today. A rather substantial volume of selling orders had accumulated over the three-day shutdown and the execution brought lower prices during the early dealings. Trading dulled considerably thereafter and the market tended to drift slightly lower.

BANK DEPOSIT SAFEGUARDS PROPOSED

Reserve Guarantee Would Eliminate Objectionable Methods of Some Bankers

By THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE
Author and Financial Editor of the Chicago Herald and Examiner

CHICAGO, Sept. 8—Urging reform of banking laws, M. A. Graettinger, executive secretary of the Illinois Bankers Association, declares:

"Give us better security for our deposits," seems to be the cry of those who have their money frozen in the bank suspensions of recent years.

Senator Fess of Ohio, chairman of the Republican National Committee, points out lack of public confidence in banks and loan institutions as one of the reasons for the present inability of business says:

"It is not that we do not have the funds, but the fear that runs will be made on banks. That explains why savings are withdrawn from certain institutions and placed in the postal savings department. It is merely a matter of safety."

The remarkable increase of deposits in the postal savings banks during the last 12 months is explained by the increase in confidence. Here postal savings have grown from $80,000,000 to $240,000,000.

Only 2 per cent interest is paid by the government on these savings. The limit is $2,500. The Attorney General, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster General constitute the board which manages the funds and supervises its loans.

SAFETY FUNDAMENTAL

Safety for depositors is the fundamental principle of the sound banking. Many laws have been passed to effect this safety. Nevertheless a canvass of the United States Senate drew from 21 Senators the positive statement that they believe the banking laws are inadequate.

This and other opinions of the public in the country convinced Senator Fess that the proposal has been made to amend the Federal Reserve Act to require each Federal Reserve Bank to guarantee deposits of its member banks.

The idea underlying this amendment is the ordinary theory of insurance. All of the capital of each Federal Reserve Bank is provided by the member banks which elect two-thirds of the nine directors of the Federal Reserve Bank.

PLAN OF PAYMENT

To require each Federal Reserve Bank to guarantee deposits of its member banks and at the same time give it supervisory power over those member banks—as well as the examining power which it already has—would assure prompt elimination of objectionable banking methods and inefficient management if these evils crept into the operation of a member bank.

If these evils were not corrected the Federal Reserve Bank of the district would exclude the guilty member bank from membership and order it to liquidate.

But depositors would not have to wait to get their money. The Federal Reserve Bank would pay all deposits out of its own capital and after receiving the assets of the liquidated bank would provide on all member banks of the district any loss it might have suffered by paying depositors of the liquidated bank in full.

GERMAN WHEAT DEAL PENDS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8—(AP)—(INS.)—If an envoy of the German government is coming to Washington to negotiate the purchase of 500,000 tons of wheat he will be received with open arms by the Federal Farm Board.

"I haven't heard anything about it, but I hope it is true," said James C. Stone, chairman of the board, when queried about a news dispatch from Berlin reporting that Germany is interested in obtaining more American wheat on long-term credits. At the German embassy it was stated that nothing is officially known of the enterprise.

BERLIN, Sept. 8—(AP)—The Telegraf-Union said today that the German government has concluded a contract to buy 500,000 tons of wheat from the United States Farm Board, delivery to be made during the second half of the current agricultural year as from next January.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8—Sales of General Electric refrigerators during the last quarter registered record gains, while August business was about the average, according to Rex Cole, president of Rex Cole, Inc., on his return from the national General Electric refrigeration convention at Association Island, Lake Ontario.

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 8—Domestic crude oil output in the week ended September 5 averaged 1,796,007 barrels daily, which is a decrease of 4,943 barrels from the preceding week, according to the Oil and Gas Journal.

Liverpool Wheat Market.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 8—The market was up ¼ to ½ penny higher, opened unchanged to ¼ penny higher, but at 1 p. m. was up 1 to 1¼ pence compared to Friday.

The market closed ¼ penny higher.

Bankers Plan to Restore Real Estate Credit

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

FINANCIAL MEN ARE STARTING to take constructive steps to restore the reputation of real estate securities, in the aftermath of the wave of unwise financing of building projects before the collapse of the real estate boom, has come a series of bankruptcies and defaults. The market for real estate securities has been utterly demoralized.

The task of putting sick building properties back on their feet would be difficult enough if they were suffering from depressed business conditions alone, but it is further complicated by the fact that many projects were grossly overfinanced.

During the period from 1925 to 1929 it was common practice to appraise properties at inflated figures when preparing data for financing purposes. As a result of this the real estate mortgage bondholders, instead of providing half the money needed for a building, usually put up all the money and the owners of the building had no real investment.

With the coming of the depression many of these properties have been unable to meet their interest charges. Defaults have followed in an alarming number of cases. The slump in the market for real estate makes the sale of properties to satisfy the claims of bondholders practically impossible.

Since real estate is a frozen asset at present banking groups are attempting to do everything possible to provide for the operation and maintenance of buildings over a period of years until income expands sufficiently to restore the properties to a stable basis. Usually this involves the extension of interest and sinking fund payments and the establishment of long term settlement arrangements with other creditors.

In Chicago the George M. Forman Realty Trust has been making progress in restoring properties and protecting investors during the past year. Over $12,500,000 of real estate securities on 29 buildings have been deposited with this organization. Originally it was planed to handle only the properties financed by George M. Forman & Co. Recently the Forman Realty Trust has been asked to take over other large groups of properties.

The organization has been successful in taking four properties out of receivership. Even in some properties milked of all possible income by owners of the equities, the investment will be recovered by income added during the first year of the trust.

The restoration of the standing of real estate bonds is of great importance to general business. Until buildings are taken out of receivership it will be difficult to find a basis for the resumption of construction activity. New financing will be impossible as long as the existing black mark stands against real estate securities.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 8—The bond market declined irregularly today on moderate volume.

VALLEY STEEL ACTIVITY OFF

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 8—District steel plant operations during the first half of the current week declined to the lowest level of the year. By midweek a rebound in steel production here is certain. Whether the upturn will carry mill activity in the district beyond the 32 per cent level is doubtful.

Steel production in the Youngstown district has slumped to approximately 28 per cent of capacity largely as a result of the Labor Day shutdown. The current rate compares with 37 per cent last week.

Executives Believe One More Conference Will Clear Merger Obstacles

By MERRYLE RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Constructive developments in connection with the four system railroad merger plan in the East are likely much sooner than generally realized in Wall street.

Already most of the points of dispute among the interested railroad executives and financiers have been ironed out and some of the leaders in the merger movement believe that the remaining ones can be cleared up in one more conference. Up to the present, the executives have been meeting frequently, to consider a steadily shrinking list of disputed questions.

Mr. Rukeyser

SHORT LINE PROBLEM

Since the White House announced that progress was being made, the real stumbling block has not been the opposition of the New York Central to the use of Nickle Plate trackage by the Pennsylvania, as reported. The main obstacle was working out a program for the many short lines involved. This has now been done. Then, too, there were difficult problems in connection with the use of terminals and trackage, most of which have already been solved.

The New York Central, some months ago, agreed to leave the question of the use of Nickel Plate trackage by the Pennsylvania to arbitration and, though the arbitrators have not yet come together, I am reliably informed that the full data have been assembled for them.

TO SUBMIT PETITION

As soon as the railroads are in substantial agreement on the main points, they will submit a petition to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Accordingly, the actual consummation of the plan to put all the carriers in the East in four systems is still quite a ways off and must be regarded as a long term development in connection with the rehabilitation of railroad credit rather than an emergency measure. The reporting of tangible progress, however, should be heartening news.

Penna. Power Yield High During July

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Production of electricity reached its highest point in three months during July in Pennsylvania. The Geological Survey reported today. 573,261,000 kilowatt hours of electric energy was generated at plants for public use in July as against 543,695,000 in June and 536,489,000 in May. The July total, however, was 8 per cent below that of July, 1930.

The increased production occurred entirely in fuel consuming generating plants, the production by water-power falling off more than 12,000,000 units from the previous month. To meet that increase gains in the consumption of both coal and natural gas were reported with fuel oil slightly declining in use.

'Ask Right to Cut Rates on Cotton

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Carriers operating in the Southwest have petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission for relief from the provisions of its decision in the cotton rate structure investigation case in order that they may reduce rates on cotton moving to New Orleans. This is asked the petition stated, because of truck and barge competition.

Tony Outlines Plans to Get Mrs. Carstairs' Jewels

CHAPTER XXIII

Fanchon said, slowly, not thinking rapidly:

"And if I—decide to come——"

He flushed deeply, the dark blood staining the olive skin.

"If you decide to come you will never regret it. I will be good to you, Fanchon. We will leave this country, we will go, perhaps to a little place in Cuba which I know of, where no one will find us. We will live—happily, luxuriously. I will arrange that Evelyn be taken care of. You need not worry on that score. The Carstairs will never know of that part of your masquerade."

She said evenly:

"There is nothing to keep me here."

"Not even—Collin?" he asked keenly.

"No. What do you think I am?"

"I have seen him—with you."

"A Carstairs may look at a cousin." Fanchon said, with hard lightness, and regretted that. Tony's attitude also changed.

"I have seen you at other times. What he wanted from you, he gained. He chanced to be near. He chanced to turn toward me——"

"I'm bored," she said, suddenly playing a part. "Tony, I'm really tired. You——"

"Yes—you are tired. You're not with me. I'm not with you. I'm——" he said, and suddenly was willing, willing in the moment, to renounce—

She left him to finish the sentence as he wished. He could read as she had never before thought to wish.

"And so you will stay," he questioned.

OUTLINES PLANS

She did not answer. He raised her chin. Her eyes met his and smiled. She put her hand to the pearls at her throat as if to still some emotion or impulse.

"I—can't believe it. I can't believe you. Yet I want to." His lean brown hand shot out and grasped her wrist so that she winced and bit back a cry of pain. "If you double-cross me—" he threatened and he, too, left his sentence unfinished.

It was sometime the old Tony who spoke.

She said steadily:

"I am perfectly aware of what will happen if I do. What are your plans, Tony? If I am to go with you it is better not to keep me in darkness."

"You will get me an invitation to this affair," he said releasing her wrist, "and you will find out what costume Carstairs is wearing. Before it is over you will complain of a headache and I will take you home. You will report upon the Carstairs' remarks. When they come in, you will not have gone to bed. You will be dressed for traveling under a negligee. You will stay up to assure them you are quite all right. You will also insist upon letting the servants go to bed on your return and will yourself help Mrs. Carstairs to undress. You will bring her something to drink . . . water . . . milk—it doesn't matter. Carstairs will probably have a drink, too, if you join him, lightly enough, but with a straight, unsmiling gaze . . . "Romeo was a tragic sort of ass. Appropriate enough. Still, Mercutio has some lines I find even more appropriate . . . 'tis not so deep as a well nor so wide as a church, but 'tis enough, 'twill serve—'"

IDENTICAL COSTUMES

Fanchon's Juliet gown was conventional enough, in line and fabric and in the color—which was white. Her dark blue-black curls were bound with the Juliet pearls—small seed pearls, quite genuine. Her mask was a charming frivolous affair of satin. She looked almost intolerably lovely, the turquoise eyes brilliant under the pearl-capped dark hair, her golden skin flushed with authentic rose, her lips painted an even deeper scarlet than was natural with them. And Collin in the black velvet and gold of his doublet and hose was an interesting foil for her.

But Cesare Gilli arrived in an almost identical costume. The two men looked at one another and exclaimed . . . for, with their eyes hidden by masks, they looked very much alike . . . they were somewhat the same build, they were both dark-skinned, both wore small mustaches.

Collin felt an illogical anger at the introduction of a second Romeo, while the other guests crowded about them laughing. For a moment Fanchon was almost as white, save for her lips, as her ivory and pearl gown.

But Senor Gilli apologetically, "I had no idea of your chosen costume, Mr. Carstairs. What an absurd coincidence!"

Mrs. Carstairs remarked, laughing: "Our Juliet deserves two Romeos, does she not?" and the party went in to a dinner which Fanchon, for one, barely tasted.

Synopsis

Lovely Fanchon Meredith is wanted by the San Francisco police in connection with a murder committed by her sweetheart, "Tony." Fanchon did not know he was a gunman. She escapes by airplane under the name of "Smith." Aboard is Evelyn Howard, whom Fanchon had met on a voyage from Hawaii. Evelyn is going to New York to live with her aunt, the wealthy Mrs. Carstairs, whom she never saw. The plane crashes and Fanchon is the only survivor. To get away from Tony and the past, she goes to the Carstairs home as "Evelyn." A strong bond of affection grows between Mrs. Carstairs and her niece. Collin Carstairs, the son, is at first antagonistic because of his "cousin's" Hawaiian escapades and her self-righteous attitude when his mother offered aid, but Fanchon's sincerity overcomes his objections. They fall in love. After a happy summer at Southampton, Fanchon makes her debut in New York. Collin, though realizing their relationship is a barrier, cannot resist professing his love. Fanchon cannot acknowledge hers without revealing her identity. A few days later a threatening note comes from Tony. She visits him and repulses his advances. Tony informs Fanchon that Evelyn is alive, but has lost her memory. He threatens to expose Fanchon unless she introduces him to Mrs. Carstairs as "Cesare Gilli." Two days later Tony calls at the Carstairs home. Fanchon introduces him as an old friend.

DAILY SHORT STORY

'Fifi'

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

Girl Argues With Man Over Ownership of Dog

"Oh, how perfectly lovely of you!"

Morton Ellis stopped and looked first at the beautiful young thing who had spoken and then, not recognizing her, he turned to see if it were not someone back of him to whom she had adressed the remark.

There was no one back of him. No one else in sight along this shady walk in the park other than Morton and the charming girl.

Morton lifted his hat and said: "I beg your pardon, Miss."

"Fifi," she said, indicating the fluffy cocker spaniel that Morton was leading on a leash.

Then she knelt and called the pup.

"Come to Moms, dearie—did you get losted and a nice kind mans find you for Moms?"

The pup advanced to her, wagging its little tail and licking her outstretched hand.

"Wherever did you find her?" the girl asked.

"Find her—find her?"

Morton seemed puzzled.

A slight shadow of annoyance at the young man's seeming stupidity appeared on the girl's face.

"Was you scared when you got lost?"

The girl was addressing the dog.

She picked the pup up and hugged it for a moment.

"I don't see," she said, arising and sitting on the park bench that was just behind her, "how you could have known. It must have been a lucky coincidence, for I only telephoned in to the papers an hour ago to advertise Fifi."

NOT SARCASM

Morton Ellis, still holding the little green leather leash, sat down beside the girl.

"You have evidently lost a dog," he said.

"If you are trying to be sarcastic—"

She hesitated and frowned, slightly bewildered. The good-looking young man's face gave no sign that he was trying to be funny.

He shook his head.

"No sarcasm intended in asking if you had lost a dog, Miss, I assure you."

"Dear li'l Fifums, so glad to find Momsy again," she said. The pup wriggled again and licked her cheek. "See how happy she is?"

"Why not, being cuddled like that, and by so charming a young lady?"

The girl's cheeks reddened. She became quite dignified.

"I do not like compliments," she said coldly.

"However, the fact remains that you are beautiful and the pup is happy."

The girl studied him for a moment. He was well dressed, in excellent taste. He was attractive, his smile was genial and he had every appearance of affluence.

"I am dreadfully embarrassed," she said finally.

"Have I done anything—"

A MISUNDERSTANDING

"No, no—except to try a little flattery, but I can see that it was said out of mere politeness. What embarrasses me is the fact that you do not appear to be in need of money—I hesitate to reward you for returning Fifi, and so I can only thank you and run home to Joe with Fifi."

"Joe? Ah, your husband is also fond of dogs."

The girl laughed at this. Her pretty eyes twinkled.

"Joe is my sister, Josephine. Her husband gave me Fifi for a present when he and Joe returned from their honeymoon. I wouldn't have him think, for worlds, that I was so careless as to lose Fifi."

The girl stood up and reached for the leash.

"I will carry Fifi and you may keep the leash. How did you happen to find her, and where did you get the pretty leash?"

Morton Ellis also arose, but he retained a strong hold on the leash loop.

"Will you please sit down, Miss? There seems to be a rather embarrassing misunderstanding."

"Misunderstanding?"

"About the ownership of this pup."

The young lady sat down suddenly and stared at Morton, but she kept a firm hold of the pup.

"Why, how can there be any misunderstanding?"

"You seem to be under the impression that this little pup is your property. I am forced to maintain that I am the sole owner."

The girl gasped. The young man seemed to be quite serious about it.

"Surely you don't mean to say—why how can you claim Fifi? See how she knows me and loves me?"

"Intelligence. My pup does me proud."

"But really Fifi is mine. I lost her in this park not two hours ago!"

He shook his head, he seemed rather sad about it, but quite firm.

"But I did!" She hugged the pup again. "You got lost, didn't you Fifi? You are mine, aren't you, Fifi?"

The tail wagged and again the pup licked her cheek.

"See?" she cried.

"Lucky dog."

"Please—I don't care to go on with this. You are a stranger to me."

"My name is Morton Ellis. I live in Sixty-fifth street. Now it is you who have the advantage as I do not know who you are."

"It isn't necessary. Are you in the telephone directory?"

"My name is."

"Very well, Joe's husband will get in touch with you and reward you, so if you will kindly—"

She passed and started to fumble to undo the leash at the collar.

"Sorry, Miss Unkown Beauty, but I cannot permit it. After all, while I mourn with you over the loss of your pet, this dog is mine."

"Why—why how can you be so mean? You probably picked her up and intended keeping her when I saw you. I cannot permit it."

"But, my dear girl, actually, the dog belongs to me."

He was rather distressed by this time and a little excited. The young lady yanked at the leash. It came from his hand but he instantly recovered it.

Patrolman Riordan came down the path at this moment.

CALLS POLICEMAN

"Mr. Officer!" the young thing called.

He eyed the couple and came over to them.

"He is annoying me—terribly."

"Make a complaint, Miss, and I'll run him in."

"I do complain. He tried to steal my Fifi!"

"Your what?"

"My little dog here."

"Oh." He turned to Morton. "Give her her dog."

Morton winked at the officer. "It happens to be my dog, officer. I was strolling along here when she pounced on the little mutt—"

"Who are you?" Riordan asked Morton.

He gave his name and address.

"Sure, now I recognize you, sir—Senator Ellis' son. And who are you?" He turned to the girl.

"Miss Arnold, from Baltimore. I am staying with my sister, Mrs. Thurman," and she gave the address.

"If ye can't decide this between ye, we'll have to go over to th' station an' put it up to th' Lieutenant," Riordan said.

"To the station? How horrible—look here," and the girl smiled again, "my sister lives only three blocks away. Her husband will be home now. He gave me Fifi and he will identify her."

Riordan looked inquiringly at Morton.

"That is an excellent suggestion, Miss Arnold, we will go at once."

"That's a good way to settle it, good luck to both of ye," Riordan said.

"But aren't you coming, Mr. Officer?"

"There's no need. Young Mr. Ellis is a gentleman. If your husband—"

"Brother-in-law."

"If he says 'tis your pooch—excuse me—dog, Mr. Ellis will give it to you."

"Very well, but I shall carry Fifi to make sure this man doesn't run away with her."

Officer Riordan laughed.

Silently Miss Bessie Arnold and Mr. Morton Ellis walked the three blocks. They went up in the elevator. Miss Arnold pushed the buzzer, a colored maid opened the door. Mr. Thurman was reading in the large living room.

"Charlie—this is a Mr. Ellis—he claims Fifi—didn't you make me a present of Fifi?" she cried.

Mr. Thurman, seeing that Morton was a decent appearing chap, acknowledged the semi-introduction and looked at the pup in her arms.

"Yes," he said, "I made you a present of Fifi."

"I hope," Bessie said, coldly to Morton, "that you are convinced."

"I never doubted but what you had a dog named Fifi, Miss Arnold. My contention is that the pup you are holding is my property."

"But Charlie—Mr. Thurman, says it is my dog and he gave her to me—"

"Just a moment, Bess."

Mr. Thurman took the pup from her arms.

Then he began to laugh. He turned to Morton.

"The pup is yours, Mr. Ellis—at least this pup is not Fifi!"

"Why Charlie!" Bessie wailed.

"What is the name of your dog?" Mr. Thurman asked.

"Pete," said Morton.

"Pete? Pete—you—Oh my goodness!"

BESS APOLOGIZES

There was silence.

"Is my face red?" she cried, then she jumped up and extended her hand.

"I can only apologize, Mr. Ellis—I'm so embarrassed—"

Just then Mrs. Thurman came in. Fifi was in her arms.

"I picked her up in the park as I was driving through," she said.

"Look at them!" Bess cried. Fifi and Pete were playing around and around a chair, having a great time.

"Look here, Mr. Ellis, will you stay and have dinner with us?" Mr. Thurman asked.

"Please do," Bess added.

Late that evening, as he was taking his leave, Bess said: "Isn't it too bad to separate Fifi and Pete?"

"Well, it could be arranged, you know, so they could always be together," Morton whispered.

Arrangements for this are well under way now, the invitations being out already.

The Police in Politics

The Public Can Improve Conditions by Electing Councilmen Not Subservient to Mayor Kline.

Pittsburgh witnessed over the week end a series of incidents illustrating the extent to which Mayor Kline has debauched the police by his insistence that even patrolmen shall work for the success of his faction of the Republican machine.

Walter Goliat, a Kline follower, was wanted on criminal charges so serious that Judge Gray fixed the bail at $26,000. Yet when William Kessler, a city policeman, assisted a constable in arresting Goliat, he was suspended from duty.

Released on bail, Goliat and a party of friends then proceeded, it is alleged, to "shoot up" the headquarters of the rival faction held responsible for the warrants sworn out against him. A policeman is said to have stood by, doing nothing, as the gangsters withdrew.

The corruption of the police force by Mayor Kline's "spoils system" has proceeded to a point at which the force cannot be relied upon at all for the enforcement of the election laws or for the arrest of criminals closely associated with Mayor Kline's machine. That is why it has been necessary to call in state troopers to protect the registrars and citizens during the registration of the voters.

The public, fortunately, is not without means of improving conditions. It can elect to Council men who will not be subservient to Mayor Kline, but will call him to account for his mismanagement.

There are four outstanding candidates for Council who are staunchly opposed to Mayor Kline's "spoils system" and the evils that go with it. They are Robert Garland, Charles Anderson, P. J. McArdle and John D. Houston.

Made in Pittsburgh

The City's Products Are Used in the Development of Many of the New Inventions.

It is always a pleasure and a source of civic pride to learn of a Pittsburgh connection with the great scientific and industrial achievements of the age—and this notwithstanding that local products are used in the development of many of the new inventions.

Here, for instance, is the announcement that a "slow-motion" locomotive constructed in Pittsburgh will be employed in drawing the Navy's new dirigible, the Akron, in and out of the hangar at Lakehurst, N. J. The locomotive will make it possible to dispense with the services of 1,000 men ordinarily required to pull the ship out of the hangar.

The local connection with the Akron is a reminder of a Pittsburgh link with another celebrated dirigible, the Graf Zeppelin. The gas used in propelling the Graf Zeppelin on the flight around the globe was discovered in a Pittsburgh laboratory, that of the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research, from which numerous other useful inventions have gone to the world.

A Meeting for Shippers

The Advisory Board Session to Be Held Next Week Will Be an Important One.

The Allegheny Regional Advisory Board is to hold a meeting here on Thursday of next week, and invites manufacturers, shippers and railroad men to attend.

The Advisory Board's meetings are always of interest, and this one promises to be particularly important to the public.

The board brings shippers and transportation men together in programs for the facilitation of the handling of freight. In the past it has helped to prevent car shortages by giving the railroads an estimate of the numbers of cars that would be required by the producers of the principal commodities handled.

We presume there is no danger of a car shortage at this time; but as an index to the business outlook it will be valuable to know what the manufacturers think their car requirements will be.

These conferences make possible avoidance of wasteful effort. And avoidance of waste is of more importance to many a concern at this time than it is when conditions are normal.

Autos' Terrible Toll

Motorists Would Do Well to Inquire Into Causes of Accidents, to Guard Against Them.

Nine persons were killed and 11 others injured in automobile accidents in the Pittsburgh district over the week end. And so common have these tragedies become that the story was scarcely first page news.

Motorists should not permit themselves to become callous to reports of automobile mishaps. In callousness lies danger of carelessness.

It is desirable that every driver of an automobile shall remain sensitive to and keenly interested in news of motor accidents. Let motorists read the accounts of these mishaps and study the causes that led to them, and they will be better prepared to guard against mishaps themselves.

The public authorities, too, should study automobile accidents and take steps, wherever possible, to prevent their recurrence. For example, there is obvious need of a protective barrier at the point where a motorist plunged to his death yesterday on Elmhurst street, North Side.

Back to Work

The Summer Holidays Are Over, and Fresh Activities of Many Kinds Are in Order.

Labor Day, by common consent, marks the end of the summer holidays, the conclusion of the vacation season.

And so we find a resumption of many kinds of activity today. The grand jury has convened and the courts are resuming jury trials. The rural schools are reopening. The Pittsburgh Real Estate Board and other organizations are holding again the weekly meetings that were suspended during the hot weather.

It is time for everybody to shake off the sluggishness of summer, to get back to work, to start the wheels of industry, to attack the problems of the period with fresh vigor and new enthusiasm.

Forward Men! If You Have No Previous Engagements

In this picture you see the Grand Prohibition Crime Parade. Also on the right you see Mr. Business Revival and where he is GETTING it, right on the point of the nose.

You note the unrelenting attitude of old Mr. Dry Fanatic.

He holds the club that frightens lawmakers, so what can you do? "Nothing," Echo answers.

The "Big Shot" is sitting on the bench, old man Prohibition himself, and beside that poor little girl "America's Prospects." What good can an Empress Eugenie hat do her?

If she is counting on that second class hero Mr. "Business Revival" she will count a million, and nothing will happen while Prohibition stays around.

Count the generals leading the great parade of "Prohibition's Pals." Crooks, Felons, Thieves, Blackmailers, Kidnapers, Thugs, Gunmen, Hijackers, Drug Peddlers, Bandits, Bootleggers, Racketeers, Child Shooters and GANGSTERS.

Nothing missing there.

The Re-Marrying Fad

All these lightning marriages and hair-trigger divorces out in Hollywood and everywhere else are beginning to make my head swim!

* * *

Guessing "Who's Whose in Matrimony" is becoming the great national game. It exhausts all your ingenuity and imagination just to get a crowd together for a party.

* * *

You plan a cozy little gathering of congenial married couples a week ahead and by the time it is to come off, you have to shuffle all the place cards because half the husbands and wives are separated and engaged to somebody else.

An actress files a suit for divorce, and before the slow old courts can get around to the case, she has broken her engagement to the "other man" and is trotting around with Hubby again and talking of re-marrying him.

* * *

That's what gets us all mixed up—this fad for RE-MARRYING your last season's husband or your last week's wife!

* * *

Apparently there is nothing like separating two people for a little while to hold them together for life.

* * *

Take away the microscope of domestic propinquity and the powerful and cruel lens of breakfast-table proximity and behold, they can't see the flaws in each other any more! All they can see is the old romantic halo that dazzled them in the first place. All they needed was a little perspective on each other!

It must be WONDERFUL! It must be a sweet and satisfying sensation to re-marry your ex-husband! All the thrills of a honeymoon—and none of the shocks, surprises and disappointments at the discovery that you have married a human being instead of an angel!

* * *

You know just what to feed him in order to keep him in a good humor. Just where he flings his shoes and his cigaret stumps, just how to avoid getting on his nerves, just how many times you will have to call him before he will get up mornings, just how much or how little it means when he glances at another woman, just how long he will keep you waiting and just how to dodge an argument or forestall a scrap.

* * *

You have his sins and his virtues all catalogued and filed. And in spite of all, you still LOVE him!

* * *

Oh, yes, re-marrying your husband must be something like the delicious sensation of getting back to America after six months abroad, and finding all the dear familiar things like green corn, ice cream sodas, rocking chairs and chewing gum slot machines still there!

* * *

It must be worth the price of the divorce just to get back together again and find that love isn't dead—and that he or she is the ONE person in all the world that you want!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Economic adjustments have wrought strange shifts to the New York picture. In almost every block spouts a fluid little drama of pathos and often comedy. The superintendent of an exclusive apartment house in East Sixty-third street was a year ago an occupant of the finest suite.

Today he and his wife live in the basement. Four hotels on the fashionable East Side have night clerks who were formerly high-paying patrons. At first there was an inclination among those whose fortunes faded to hide from those who knew them in affluence.

But gradually there were so many in the same boat that pride was tossed aside. It is not unusual for a restaurant customer—it has happened twice to me—to recognize the waiter serving him as someone he has known when holding down a far superior job.

Henry Sell was recently the victim of an experience that illustrates the twirling of fate. He motored to a resort in Westchester with friends for dinner. The starter who handed him his carriage check looked vaguely familiar and he looked again.

Recognizing him as an old acquaintance who had held a responsible position the last time he saw him, Sell suspected a practical joke. With an effort at mock gravity he fished out a coin expecting the incident to wind up in a laugh and mutual back slapping.

Instead the man backed away abashed and said: "Not that, please, Henry. It is humiliating enough." Then he walked stiffly away. Puzzled, Sell sought the proprietor and learned the fellow, under an assumed name had sought the job and had been filling it capably for three weeks.

For many on Broadway, the business halt merely brought relaxation—a brief respite in inconclusively fair-weather lives. Yet to as many others it proved a noble test of courage. A lady who handed me change in a drug store the other day had her name 18 months ago blazing in theater lights four blocks away.

* * *

Yet there are vivid splashes here and there to the shadowy travail all of us have been experiencing. A young man with his wife and three children, suddenly out in a newspaper merger, rented an office with $60 of his last $90 weekly salary. He angled for radio and talkie possibilities, landing jobs on a 10 per cent basis during the life of contracts. His clients were those who had never thought of such work before. The young man's income is $125 a week and mounting, which proves it sometimes pays to be kicked out of a job.

* * *

My knowledge of furniture was strictly Grand Rapids until the recent experience of outfitting a New York apartment. Discussions of the Jacobean, the William and Mary periods, the Queen Anne and Louis XIV sent me in search of the family album or to give the radio dial a twist. Chippendale, the Adam brothers, Sheraton and Hepplewhite were just a lot of old fogey putterers. But today when furniture pops up as a topic I sit saucer-eyed on the edge of a chair agog. Furniture is still just a lot of wood to me, but reading catalogs has made me curious. I'm even enjoying Hergesheimer's antique articles and Jimmy Durante's "Wood, Wood, Wood" is my favorite tune.

* * *

In fact I believe much of our highbrow patter is an offshoot of "catalog culture" and not ponderous textbooks. Even in my limited smattering I have frequently heard exact quotations lifted bodily from catalogs I have perused. Furthermore, I have the confession of a welcome bachelor to every dinner table that his gallant observations on art are the sole result of studying the catalogs from the galleries. He has not even visited the Metropolitan Art Museum.

* * *

And then there are bookish souls who prattle of vellum, morocco, crushed levant, doublures of marbled calf, silk fly leaves and gilt tops. There is the story of one of them telling of his "Astral Edition" of Wilde in floriated gilt back and fly leaves in white moire. "Some day," mumbled a stew, "I'm going to put on my lace underwear, squirt myself all up with perfume and borrow it."

It's that way wherever I go, since Vallee married.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I have never been able to understand sorrow . . . to see the need for it.

Nor could I quite believe that old saying—"Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted." Maybe they would be, at some future date, but what was the good of all this suffering now? Couldn't we be as wise and strong without sorrow? Couldn't we do even more good in the world if our hearts weren't broken?

Familiar questions, aren't they? You have asked them, too. The other day I came across something that may be the answer.

It was just a news item about Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York. It said that he had once more given a pint of blood to be used in making a serum to fight infantile paralysis.

When he was already a grown man, this sickness came upon Franklin Roosevelt. It must have been a frightful thing to him, even a more frightful thing, perhaps than it would have been to a little child. For there he was in the full strength and pride of his maturity — cut down by this creeping horror. Terrible thoughts he must have had as he lay there on that bed and you can see that the memory of it has never left him. He can understand, as another man wouldn't, what that disease means.

Suffering put that understanding into his mind. Suffering put something into his blood, too. For the blood of the man who has recovered from infantile paralysis isn't like the blood of untouched men. It has been changed and modified . . . It has a new quality in it . . . it holds a healing power over the thing which ravaged it. If it can be used, in a serum at an early stage of the disease, the patient may recover.

Queer—isn't it?—to think of pain doing a thing like that to a man's blood. Putting it through hell first and then, as a sort of blessed and priceless recompense, giving it the power to heal others who are in the grip of that same pain.

I sat thinking after I read that news item, thinking how fine it is of Gov. Roosevelt to give his blood again and again as he does, making a blessing out of his own adversity. Thinking, too, with an ache in my heart, of the agony and terror of the mothers who must watch their children die.

And my own agony and terror, that I can never forget, came back to me. And a wave of the old bitterness—

Then, quietly, as though here was the answer I had long sought there came another thought . . . WAS THIS THE REASON FOR SORROW?

Was sorrow a sort of hell that one went through to give one understanding? A sort of disease that one endured, to give one the power to heal and comfort other sorrow?

Then that was what the old verse meant—"Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted."

It didn't merely mean that your tears would be wiped away. It didn't mean that you would forget the pain. It meant that you would be given a new, proud something that made all the pain worth while . . . THE POWER TO HEAL.

THE POWER TO GIVE HEALING OUT OF A STRICKEN HEART, AS FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT GIVES HEALING OUT OF HIS STRICKEN BODY.

Text for Today It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.—John, vi 63.

An Ideal Portrait Subject

By Claude G. Bowers

When Lytton Strachey's latest book, consisting of a number of miniature portraits of little known people, aside from those dealing with some of the famous historians, appeared, some of the critics seemed to resent the unimportance of these inconspicuous people. And yet, perhaps, there are personalities among the little known quite as interesting as among those who are famous. Indeed, among those who are famous, as we all know, are many who are not nearly so brilliant or fascinating as others whom we know, who are known only to a limited circle.

Luck does play a part in human lives; and opportunity does not always come; and there are few Napoleons to make the opportunity. When Theodore Dreiser wrote his "Twelve Men" he was not dealing with celebrities of the first order; and yet he produced a classic volume of intense interest. He wrote of interesting people, not of the interesting positions they held. And so with Lytton Strachey in his latest volume.

* * *

Who More Interesting Than Ned Hannegan?

Who could be more interesting for a portrait painter in words than Ned Hannegan? Probably you have never heard his name, and yet he was a Congressman, a United States Senator, a minister to Prussia, and a potential candidate for the presidency. He was interesting in these roles, but he would have been a fascinating personality had he held none of them.

He was of Irish blood, with the moving eloquence of the race, with the social charms of his people, a wit, a humorist, the beau ideal of a companion. He had the grace of a courtier and the courtier's capacity to turn a neat compliment. He lived in a little town in Indiana, which sent him to the Legislature, and thence he moved upward rapidly.

In the Senate he was chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee at the time of the Mexican War and before. As such, he was one of the foremost leaders in the demand for "fifty-four, forty or fight," in Oregon. His eloquence was so genuine that Webster once paid him the compliment of saying that it was fortunate Hannegan did not appear until Webster's reputation had been established, or it might not have been attained. It was because of the brilliancy of his oratory that Harriet Marteneau, when listening from the old Senate gallery, impulsively threw her gloves to him as he sat down. He rose, turned to the gallery with a bow, pressed the gloves to his lips, and then into his pocket next his heart. And Harriet was no beauty. She was just a woman.

* * *

Gallantry Ended His Diplomatic Career

It was gallantry in Hannegan that prematurely ended his diplomatic career. In a political overturn he was defeated for re-election to the Senate and was sent to Berlin as minister. He was a natural courtier and he was popular among the ladies of the court. Even the Queen found him immensely diverting, and being a stout republican, recognizing in her only a beautiful and attractive woman, he paid her compliments as pointed as those with which Disraeli was wont to delight Victoria. She liked them; and the King, who could not relish the idea of an American commoner taking such liberties with royalty, is said to have requested his recall.

Thus he returned, back to the country town in Indiana, which again sent him to the Legislature. The little town contained some brilliantly promising young men who made him their idol—young lawyers they were, for Hannegan was a brilliant figure before a jury. He had one fault more serious than his fondness for beautiful and clever women—he drank heavily. And that brought tragedy.

* * *

His Indictment for Murder Demanded

He had a brother-in-law whom he loved as a brother. One night at his own home, when he had been drinking heavily, the brother-in-law, a guest, began to remonstrate with him on his weakness as he was starting up the stairs. Hot-headed always, and especially so in drink, he impulsively reached over to a mantel, grasped an antique knife he had picked up in Berlin, and struck the man he loved. The wound was fatal. The horror of it sobered him instantly and for a time his friends feared for his reason. Most of his townspeople loved him; but no man can be in politics without making enemies. These demanded his indictment for murder, his trial, conviction, and punishment.

At the time a young idolator and protege was prosecuting attorney—he who was soon to become famous as one of the great orators and political leaders of his time, Daniel W. Voorhees—Senate leader in the last administration of Cleveland. He refused to act; and when bitterly denounced, resigned, and moved to another town where his political career began.

A successor was appointed, another idolator, and he refused to act, and also resigned and moved to another county. This way Lew Wallace, soldier and author of "Ben Hur." And Hannegan never was prosecuted in earnest and nothing happened.

* * *

Drinks Too Much, Then Shoots Himself

But there was a blood blot on the town and soon he, too, left and went to St. Louis to practice law. There he was successful. Then came the time when the western country concluded that it was entitled to a presidential nomination, and Hannegan was the favorite for the honor. His candidacy was to be launched with great eclat. He would make one of his famous speeches at a great meeting, others would speak and laud him to the skies; the press would carry the story.

The night came. It was Hannegan's custom before making a speech to take a drink of liquor. This time the occasion being important, he took more than a drink. Had he spoken soon after reaching the platform the effect would have been good. But speaker after speaker preceded him; the liquor affected him; and when he rose to receive his ovation he was—drunk. His articulation was impossible. He mumbled a few words, and his horror-stricken admirers pulled him down.

That, too, sobered him, and he was conscience stricken. He agreed to all they said in condemnation. Then he went back to his hotel—and shot himself.

* * *

A Figure for a Literary Painter of Portraits

A real good literary portrait painter would find more color, more virility, and charm in such a subject as Hannegan than in most of the more successful and distinguished statesmen of his time in America. He had personality, individuality, and his life was romance and tragedy.

Chatterton was not such a raving success in literature, but he was more interesting than Southey. And portrait painters prefer interesting subjects. One could dig out of oblivion dozens of forgotten figures, who, in the perspective of the years must be put down as failures, and make one of the most interesting galleries of portraits ever painted. Often failure is more interesting than success—and all the big men are not great—and all the little people are not—small.

So why quarrel with Strachey because he sometimes tires of the Victorias, the Elizabeths, the Essexes and the Disraelis. It is dollars to doughnuts both the queens had ladies-in-waiting, now sleeping forgotten in the dust, who were more interesting personalities than their mistresses.

ALESSANDRO VOLTA

By Archibald Henderson

Electricity, beyond doubt, is the most potent force and the most important thing discovered by science in modern times. The amount of wealth created by and invested in electrical appliances and plants of all sorts is almost beyond human computation. Volta was one of those figures in the history of science who, by making a single discovery, revolutionized the world's industry.

Alessandro Volta, the father of modern electricity, was born at Como, Italy, on February 18, 1745. He came of an ancient and noble family of Milan, and was very precocious. As a lad he was noted for his cleverness. At 18 he entered upon the study of electricity. After some years of work he brought out a new theory of the Leyden jar, and designed an electrical apparatus. This brought him fame, and he became professor of physics, first in the gymnasium at Como, and in 1779 at the University of Pavia.

As an inventor, Volta was very ingenious and invented many electrical appliances. Among others, he invented the electrophorus, the condensing electroscope, the electrometer, the electric pistol and the electric lamp. To us these inventions, at least some of them, seem like toys.

But it must be remembered how little was known of electricity in those days. Electricity for a long time was regarded as a sort of fluid. At the beginning of the nineteenth century the only way that men knew of making an electrical current was by rubbing together some non-conducting materials. Electricity was then made by means of friction machines.

After making his reputation, Volta traveled through Europe, visiting other students of electricity and familiarizing himself with every detail of the new science. A famous controversy with a fellow-countryman, Galvani, led him to the epochal discovery with which his name is linked. Galvani thought he had discovered a new force, "animal electricity," in the phenomenon of the frogs' legs.

Volta took the matter up and showed that the copper skewer and the iron railing used by Galvani in his experiments were the sources of the electric current that acted on the nerves of the dead frogs.

This experiment set Volta's mind at work on the problem of generating electricity by chemical means. Eight years were consumed in working out the details of his new instrument. The device consisted of disks of two different metals, zinc and copper, arranged in couples, each couple separated from the one above and below it by a disk of cloth moistened with a weak solution of common table salt.

Volta, as has been said, was the first to domesticate the most subtle and fundamental of natural forces. He gave the name to the unit of electro-motive force. Volta died at Como on March 5, 1827.
